Lindy Parker

Hi Cusin! How's
it going. Pretty Cool here. It's been fun having lunch with you this year.
I don't know what to say so I guess I better go. Have a great year.

See ya

Nikki Parker.

Lindy,

Well, algebra has been a blast. I really don't have much to say. It seems like we say the same thing
every year. Anyway,

I'll always remember the good times: takin'
about Jimmy; me yelping about Robert. (By the way:
have you seen his pic?)

Well, you're a great gal and pal - stay that way!

Love, 863-496

Lindy,
So this is our Jr. year and we've made it this far. Lucky us! I don't know you very well
but I hope this will change. Best of luck always! Stay just the way you are!
Bye,
Always,
Trish
Jate

Hi!
Good luck
next year, Patty
Your friend
Robert
Casillas
P.S. Is you ever go to be the president?
OK.

Lindy,
I hope we become great friends.

SUMMER FUN: While on summer vacation in Port Aransas, junior Kelly Homeyer and sophomore Brent Hamilton push off of land for a boat ride. The summer allowed students to enjoy the warm weather with their friends.

Together Again

Students join for a new school year

After a summer of fun, cut short by an addition of school days, students returned to another school year.

"It seems like I had more time last year," senior Denia Tuma said. "I hated getting out of summer school and not having much of my summer left."

Summer allowed some students to enjoy the hot weather by going away on trips or traveling to the beach.

"I went canoeing and to El Paso and just bummed out," senior Amy Patterson said. "I had a cool time."

The school year offered a chance for students to see friends and to create new memories.

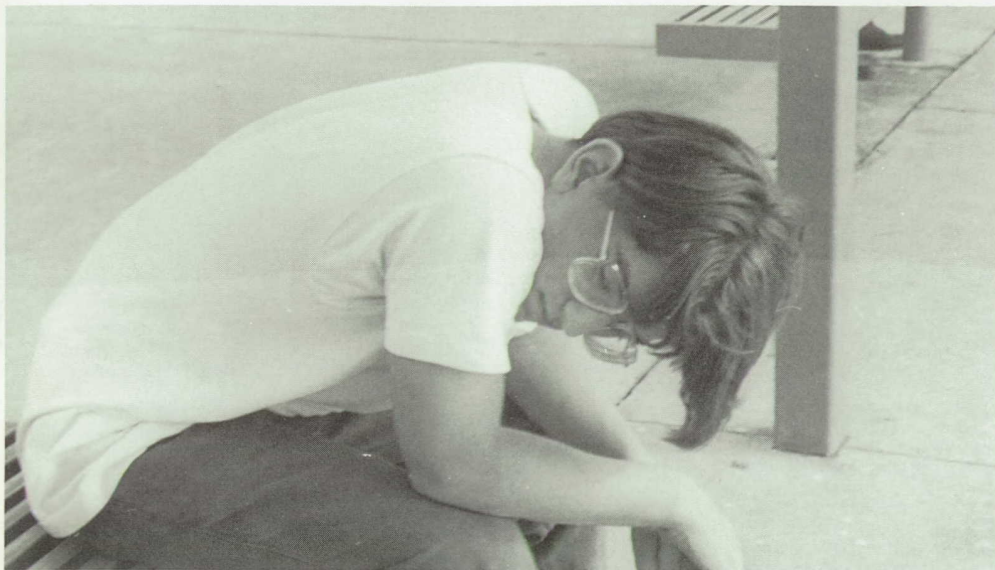

"I was excited to meet my friends again to see if they had good summers," senior Laura Stoltenberg said.

The school doors opened opportunities for students to learn and grow ALL TOGETHER NOW!

Dress for Fun

Old clothes worn once more

To pretend was all in a day's work when we were little. And like childhood, once again we found the opportunities to "dress up," and pretend on specific days.

Some of the dress up occasions included the themes for pep rallies: fish day, fifties day, college day, wild-n-crazy day, and hippie day.

"I think the dress up days are a good way to support your school spirit," junior Missy Thomas said.

Challenges occurred among students and classes as each dress up day came. In the morning students gathered together to show off their look for that day.

"I like them because everyone dresses up different and it encourages them to go to the pep rallies," sophomore Layne Wilson said. "They support the athletic system."

In addition to the pep rallies, special occasions and holidays offered a day for students to dress up.

"I love when Christmas comes around," junior Lisa Hall said. "Everyone is all dressed up in their reindeer and Santa Claus shirts." by Felicity Sagan

On dressing up for pep rallies ...

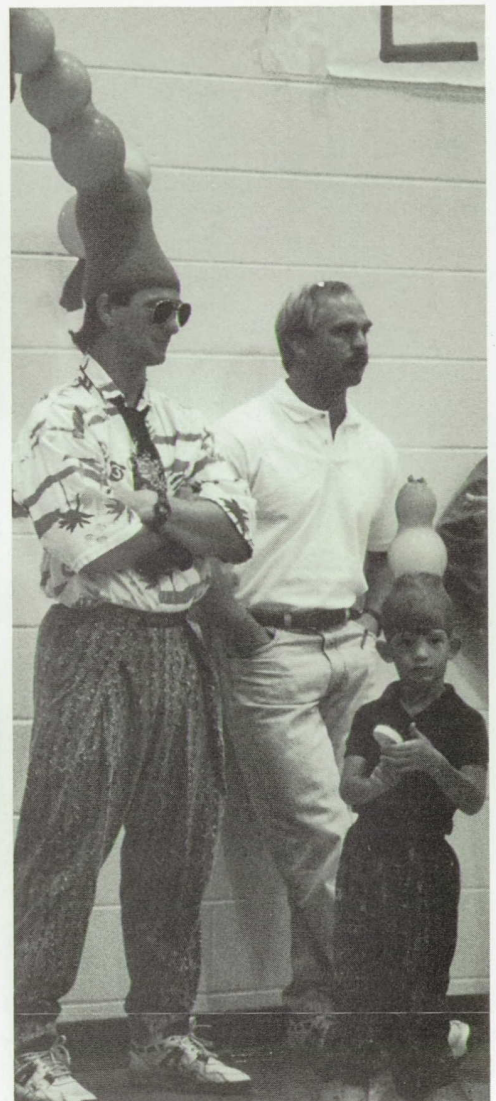

"This year is my senior year and I wanted to be remembered by my school spirit."

senior Patty Lindsay

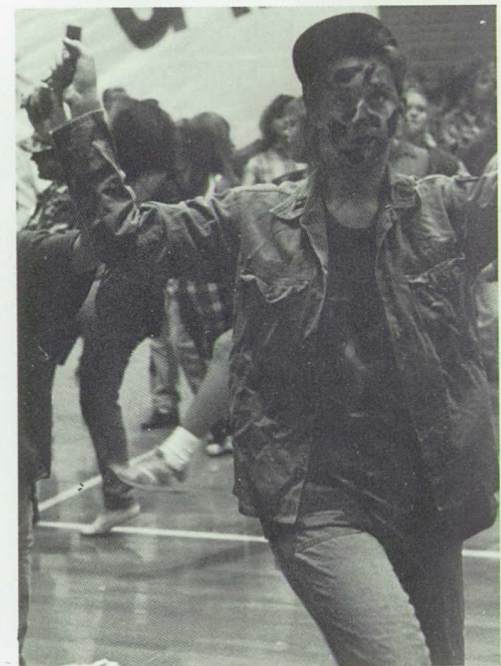

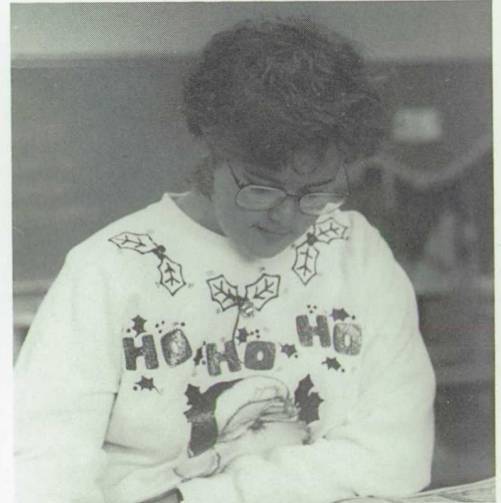

LOOKIE HERE! A group of freshmen students, Carri Woodley, Rene Umstattd, Gabbie Gil, Charlette Graham, and Kate Locke watch as the pep rally continues.

BALLOON HEAD! To get a laugh, Coach Rich Frazee and son wear balloons on their heads during the wild-n-crazy pep rally. Teachers often participated in the pep rallies' themes and skits.

SHHH! BE VEWY VEWY QUIET!! Adding to the spirit, senior Eowyn Buchan camouflages into the crowd. Digging into dad's hunting gear produced perfect costumes for duck hunting.

HEY, ISN'T THAT "DANNY?" (GREASE) As a flash to the past, seniors Brandy Powers and Patty Lindsay look around at all the great "costumes." Fifties day brought back saddle shoes and the poodle skirts for a day.

Peppy people perk up Fridays' a.m.

Five, four, three, two, one! Cheers exploded from all four classes. As the band played a happy tune, cheerleaders hopped and flopped onto the gym floor and football players lined up in front of their chairs.

Georgie, the mascot, cheered along with a group of students who danced their way onto the gym floor.

"I love it when the guys get out and dance," senior Angie Hilstrom said. "It makes it lots of fun."

As the end of the week rolled around, preparations made themed pep rallies more noticeable. Cheerleaders and student council members spent much of their free time hanging posters and decorating the gym for the next day.

"It takes about three hours after school every Thursday night," junior Shyla Cushman said.

As for student spirit, almost everyone joined in on the fun whether it was dancing on the gym floor or dressing up for the theme of the week.

"I love them," senior Laura Hanner said. "They are so much fun."

Coming Home

Old friends make new memories

Dazzling decorations, chilly weather, mums pinned on shoulders and streamers flowing to the floor represented Homecoming in October.

"Everyone comes home from school, and we can all get together," senior Jennifer Willrich said.

At the morning pep rally, nominees dressed nicely, but as the evening rolled around, some young men and women donned more formal attire.

"My favorite part of Homecoming is half time," sophomore Jamie Brooks said. "It is seeing the fancy dresses and waiting to find out what lucky girl won!"

As the night wore on, students and their dates could be seen walking through the gates into the stands to watch the game.

A number of students from past years came back to see younger classmates who might be Homecoming queen nominees or escorts. Graduates even showed up to see their friends who attended different colleges.

After two days of morning preparation for the girls and their escorts, and several days of practice for the football team, the Homecoming evening arrived, ending with a win of 57-14. by Shannon Marion

A Cultural Expression

Students learn culture through language

Dia de los Muertos - an expression of love in the celebration of life. Students who took Spanish had the opportunity to learn about this cultural celebration.

"I thought it was a good opportunity to learn, and I especially enjoyed all the food," senior Alison Mersiovsky said.

On October 30, students and teachers alike joined in the celebration. Spanish I and II students contributed refreshments and decorations while Spanish III students informed the students in English and Spanish what the day was all about.

For teachers, it provided an interest ing way to teach the students something about the culture of the language they were learning.

"I think Dia de los Muertos is the best cultural unit that we do in Spanish because it is an example of how two different cultures join together in a new celebration," Spanish teacher Earl Martin said.

For everyone involved, the celebration served as a way for students to take a break from regular classes and learn something new.

"It was educational and fun," senior Adrienne Kolly said. by Laura Low

A Time to Rest 'n Play

Weekends provide relaxation & fun

After a long and demanding week, students knew they had the weekend to look forward to. For whatever reason, students anticipated fun and activity when the weekend finally arrived.

"I look forward to Fridays because I like to go the football games, especially if they win," junior Jennifer Lindsey said.

Weekend activities varied widely from student to student. While some participated in school-related activities, others enjoyed just hanging out.

"There is nothing to do on the weekends," senior Erica Edwards said. "I usually just hang out with my friends or work."

However, several extracurricular activities required that students contribute their time on the weekends. These included club fund-raisers and events, choir, band, and drama performances, as well as athletics.

"I run cross country on the weekends," senior John Martin said. "If I do go anywhere, I go to the movies."

For some students, trying to decide what to do was a difficult decision to make. Although several frequented local hangouts, others avoided them at all costs.

"Whatever I do on the weekends, I do not go to Sonic or 7-11," senior Shea Daniel said.

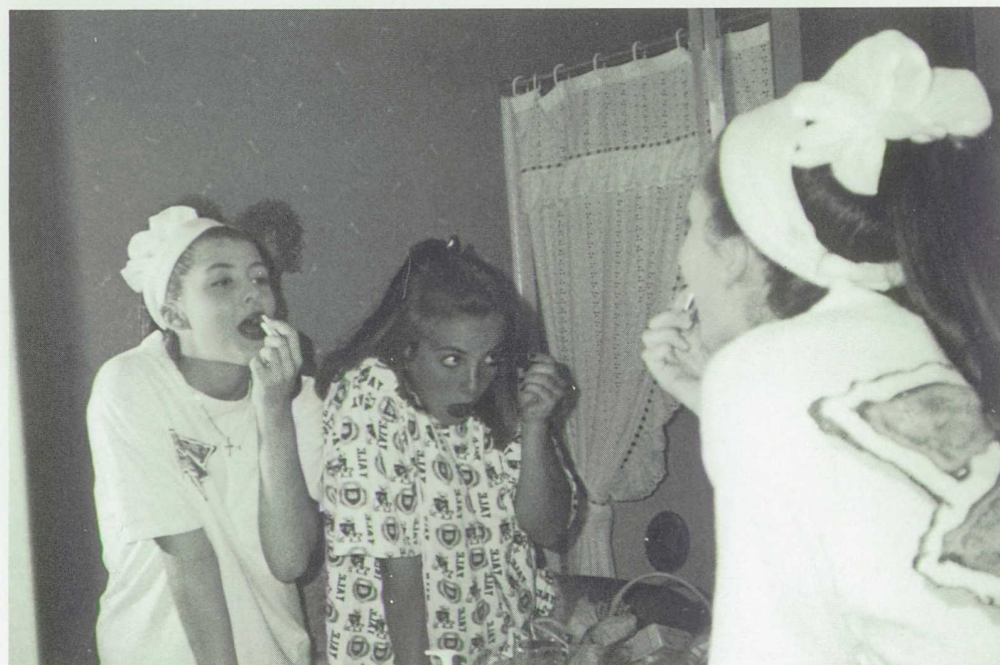

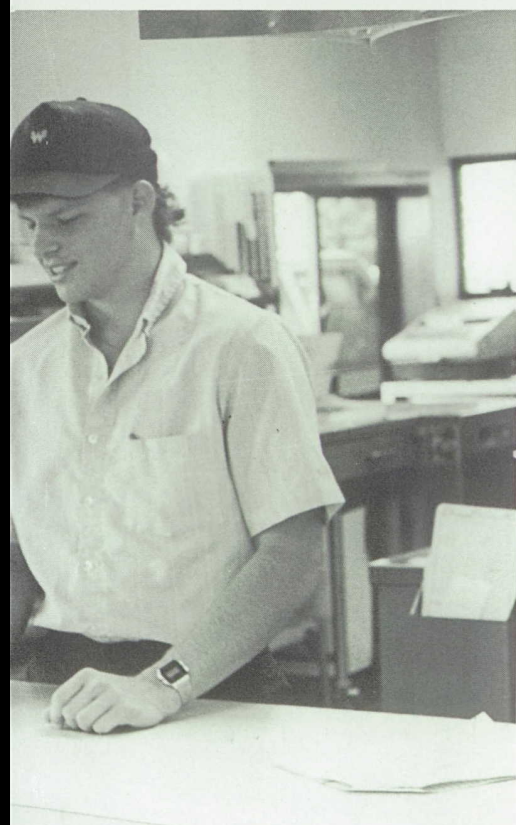

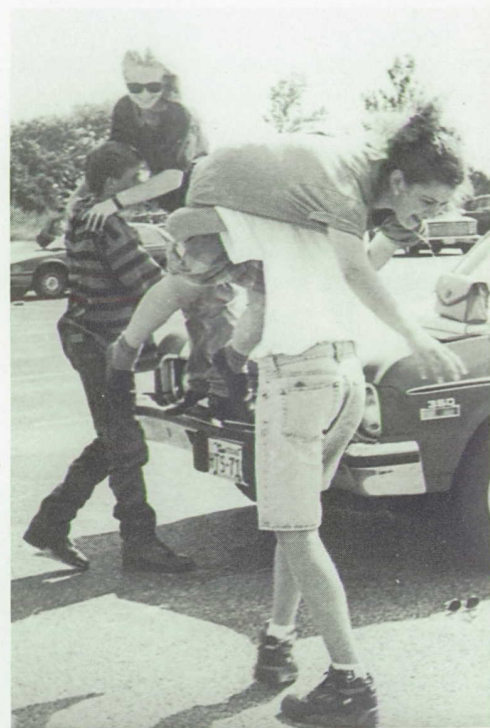

However students managed to amuse themselves, they enjoyed a well-deserved break when the school week ended.

People Are People

Personalities distinguish individuals

Everyday activity of socializing among students might have appeared scary and confusing. Differences in styles and thoughts conveyed something called attitude. Not to forget social groupings.

"People are put into two categories, those who are alive and those who are dead," junior Rob Trostle said.

How, then, should people understand their place in society, when many have not yet chosen their place.

Often a lack of caring and understanding towards one another existed.

"There are many different ways in which people can behave," junior James Janning said. "But no one behaves alike."

Still there was no way to judge human nature without being the least bit hypocritical. There were never enough facts available to make clear judgements about one another because of different personalities.

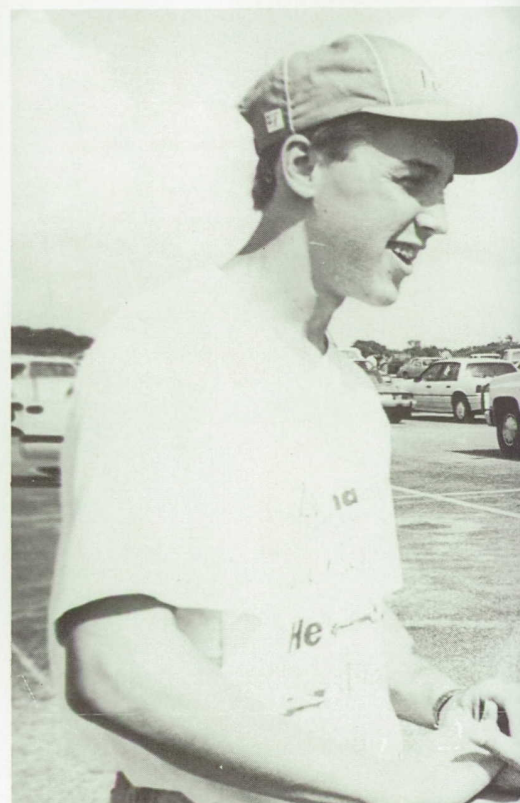

"I do not know anything about people," senior Jackie Hoover said. "But I'm slowly learning."

Third lunch added to schedule

Ring - there off!! Students took off out of their classrooms and headed down the halls. They rushed to the lunch line, detention, or out to their cars.

What caused all this comotion? Why lunch of course! The favorite "subject" of most students, and one where they stayed awake.

Lunch served as a different purpose to different kinds of people. Students used lunch time for eating, talking, and just goofing off, and as time for relaxation.

"I like lunch because I can be with all my friends and talk with them about my day," senior Tina Karnstadt said. "It's also a time to pig out."

The new rule of freshmen not being able to leave the campus created three lunches: third period lunch, 11:01-11:58, 4th period, 12:05-12:55, and fifth period lunch, 1:02-1:52.

The new rule of not leaving campus along with the addition of a courtyard where students could enjoy a meal outside changed lunch time. The administration also brought in Domino's pizza and a slushy machine.

"I have third lunch and I think third period lunch is too early," junior Shelly Holmes said. "It's more like breakfast. The only good thing about the lunch this year is that the freshmen aren't in our lunch."

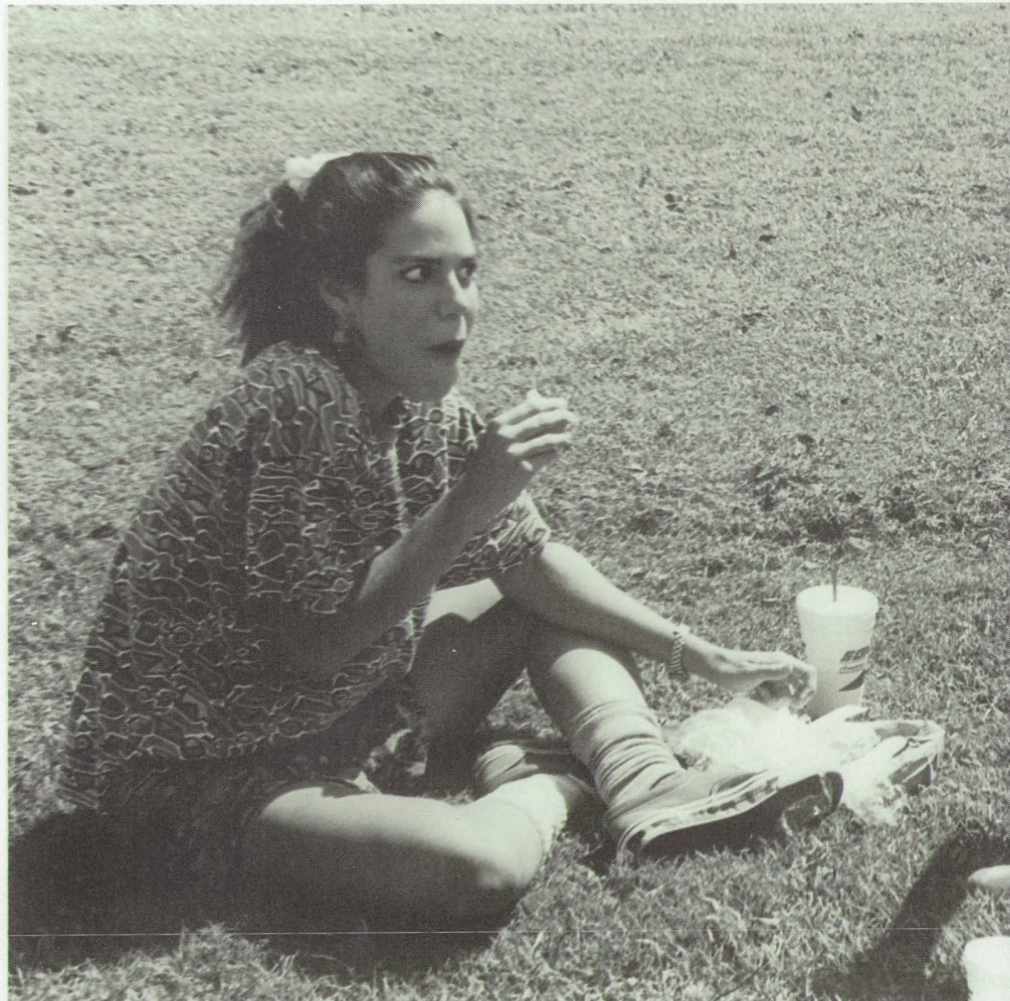

by Felicity Sagan

Fervors for Friendships

Sharing and caring adds meaning to the day

Amidst the crowded halls, laughter could be heard through the days. Voices rang in ears, as friends told friends soul secrets, and passed off the day's news to others.

"Friends need to be someone loyal," senior Michelle Mohon said. "They need to be someone you can trust, too."

On campus or off, people gathered around local hang outs to plan dates, tell jokes, or just to "hang out" with good buddies or just old friends.

"Friends. . . what would I do without them?" sophomore Jill Jacob said.

In a large school, students could usually find compassion, loyalty and even love in the friendships that arose between people.

"Relationships are always felt in the heart," senior Rod Hanson said. "In school that's a hard feeling to get used to, if any one ever does." by Mandy Stone

Coronation announces new favorites

During a "Moonlit Enchantment," students and family filled the gym, eager to see the crowning of the new Mr. and Miss GHS and the new class favorites.

Opening the ceremony, junior Amanda Polasek and freshman Renee Umstatt sang, "Sometimes Love Just Ain't Enough."

"The best part of the whole ceremony in my opinion, was when Amanda and Renee sang," sophomore Sandy Smith said.

Master, junior David Boram, and Mistress, junior Sandra Gonzales led the ceremony.

The announcing of the class favorites came first. Each class selected students of it's grade to be awarded as their favorite. The freshmen class selected Kristie Killen and Adam Foster; sophomores, Suzanne Koy and Josh Hittman; juniors, Amanda Hakala and Damen Caraway, and seniors chose Betsy Carmichael and Chad White-side.

"I wasn't at all surprised when the class favorites were announced," sophomore Trish Tate said. "I had already figured out who was going to win."

After all the class favorites were announced, the nominees for Mr. and Miss GHS were introduced. The nominees for Miss GHS were: Sadia Ahmed, Michelle Cox, Laura Hanner, and Tiffany Hubby.

The nominees for Mr. GHS were: Darren Alamazon, Geoff Moran, Juan Gomez, and Robbie Bacchus.

Teachers selected the nominees, and then the student body voted for their favorites.

Crown bearers, Katie and Ross Hewlett, children of Janet and Ross Don Hewlett, held the crowns for Mr. and Miss GHS.

Tiffany Hubby and Robbie Bacchus were announced as the new Mr. and Miss GHS. Former Mr. GHS, Wes Blackwell, handed over the crown.

Following the ceremony, students danced their way to the commons for a dance in honor of the class favorites and Mr. and Miss GHS.

"I thought the whole evening was pretty fun," sophomore Brent Hamilton said. "The whole thing was better than I thought it was going to be."

Hooray for Christmas

Red and green filled the hallways. Bells jingled and students and teachers buzzed with excitement. It could only have been one holiday . . . Christmas.

Students looked forward to the two week break for various reasons. Some planned vacations while others just needed a break from the ho-hum of high school days.

"I am so excited about Christmas break," senior Jami Holland said. "I'm going snow skiing."

However, others concerned themselves with what Santa would bring them.

"I hope I get a car," sophomore Casey Calta said.

Some students did not look forward to the break quite as much for obvious reasons.

"I have to work over the entire break," senior Ella Bredthauer said.

On December 17, the last day of school before the holiday, several clubs and organizations celebrated it in different ways. For example, the band and choir performed during seventh period. Also, the junior historians presented the annual "Living Christmas Card" in the trophy case in the hexagon.

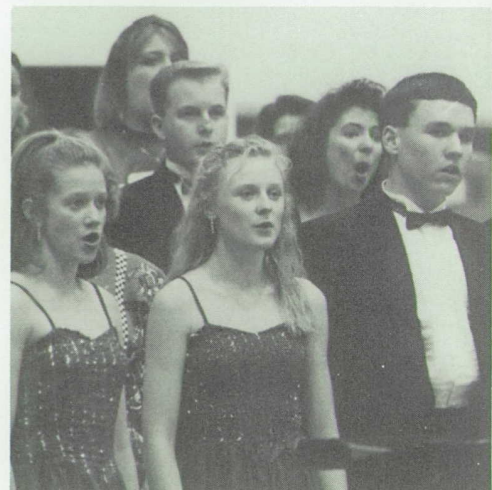

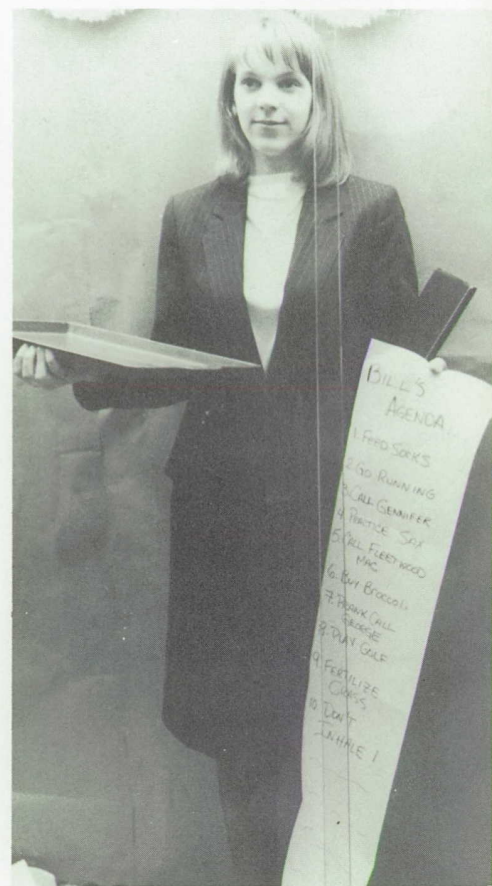

Second period classes participated by holding a door decorating contest sponsored by the Student Council. English teacher Betty Johnson's class received the first place award. Numerous participants received honorable mentions. by Laura Low

Favorite Pastimes

Hobbies Vary from Student to Student

Hobbies, the favorite pastime of students, allowed them to express their feelings and emotions. The hobbies liked by individuals showed what each person enjoyed taking time out of their busy schedules to do.

"Singing is my favorite hobby," senior Weston Coleman said. "I like being a part of the choir and I enjoy the competition of singing with others that's there."

Some hobbies only required time during the school day, such as clubs or classes, while others continued on into the student's personal time.

"I really enjoy swimming," senior Sheila Christie said. "I don't care if I have to do it all on my personal time."

While certain hobbies, such as fishing, taking care of cars, stock shows and getting acquainted with people in the music profession had to be done totally on personal time, they brought many rewards to those who sacrificed their time and efforts for enjoyment.

"I spend a lot of time talking to people in the music business," senior Tammy Tomeff said. "I have a lot of fun doing it, you get to meet so many interesting people."

Variety in the hobbies enjoyed by different ones turned out to be very diverse. Some enjoyed hobbies such as reading, collecting, talking on the phone, and computers, which did not require the company of others.

Some enjoyed being in the group scene when they participated in extracurricular activities such as dancing, mountain climbing, or any kind of sport.

Even though hobbies differed from student to student, most had a favorite activity in which they enjoyed participating.

The Show Must Go On

Miss Año Nuevo starts slow

In spite of all the circumstances that tried to prevent its happening, the Miss Año Nuevo Pageant still became a reality.

Only one week before the pageant, very few entries had been received. Application blanks had vanished from the office. Spanish club officers had directed club members and nominees to pick them up there.

Spanish club President Jennifer Cutler planned to host the event along with Vice President Alicia Braun, but only three days before, Cutler had an unfortunate car accident making her unable to attend the pageant. Senior Patty Lindsay volunteered to take her place.

"On the Thursday before, I was worried about Jennifer, finding a sound system, writing a script, doing my Calculus homework, and what strange things the guys were planning, but with everyone's help, by Friday morning everything was settled, and Saturday night was a success," Braun said.

The annual pageant managed to draw a large crowd who echoed their approval with laughter and applause.

"Everyone enjoys watching their friends make a fool of themselves in a fun way," senior Ofi Ortiz said.

The pageant, held on February 6 at 7:30 p.m. at Williams Middle School, gave willing male students the opportunity to feel like beautiful women. Most remained glad they were males, though.

"I had the opportunity to know what it was like to be a woman and I did NOT like it," senior Aldo Bohm said.

The event, sponsored by the Spanish club, used the three dollar per person admission for scholarships. The pageant raised over $900 for these scholarships.

"We give scholarships to graduating seniors within the club," Spanish club sponsor Yolanda Almaraz said.

As the evening drew to a close, Braun and Lindsay announced the finalists and the winner.

Last year's winner, Pat, a.k.a. David Napier placed the crown on the new Miss Año Nuevo's head.

The finalists consisted of Jason Clark for Pals, Steven Smith for Spanish club, Aldo Bohm as an independent, Carter Delleney for Georgettes and the reigning Miss Año Nuevo became Blake Kimbrough for HOSA.

A Show of Talent

Students perform for all to see

As the day for the annual talent show sponsored by the choir drew close, students perfected their individual talents, filled out applications and auditioned for a part in the show.

The talent show, a well-known event, was looked forward to by those with special talents. It allowed those courageous enough to participate, to show off their talents for all to see.

"I enjoyed the various talent shown by all who performed," senior Amy Patterson said. "It's neat to see kids I know on the stage doing their stuff."

Not only did students carry out solo performances in dancing, singing, and instrumental music but ensembles in singing and instrumental as well as several bands occupied the gym stage when their turn came.

Included with the show, at the beginning of each half, the Jazz-n-Pizzazz show-choir reinacted the routines they performed at contest.

"I enjoyed the singers, there was a lot of great talent this year," senior Sadia Ahmed said.

After each performance by the choir, master of ceremonies seniors Lisa Rose, Elizabeth Pope, Laurena Herrera, and Patricia Kelm introduced the upcoming acts.

"I was loving every minute of it. It made me feel like I wasn't just another fish in the sea," Kelm said. "Now people know who I am."

As the moment for the winners to be announced drew near, hearts beat faster and mouths became dry with anticipation among both participants and observers.

Then it was revealed, senior Amanda Persky and freshman Jessica Hobratch tied for fourth place, senior Laura Stoltenberg won third place, the band Psychodelic Psouls placed second and the grand winner was senior Sadia Ahmed for her dance routine.

"It felt great to know you had done your best and finally won," Ahmed said. "I had performed this dance before and this time I was really determined to reach my goal of placing."

As the night came to a close, the gymnasium was left empty for new talent as observers and participants went on their way discussing the eventful evening they had witnessed.

The Need to Unwind

Is one week enough?

When the final bell rang on the Friday before Spring Break, students raced to their cars hurrying to get out. In all the hustle, students noticed surprising happenings in the south parking lot. Some were also surprised during the day to see their classmates wearing white faces and refusing to speak.

PRIDE and the vocational department joined to show students what could occur if students mixed alcohol with driving. PRIDE chose several students to act as if they had been the victim of an accident. These students painted their faces white and pretended to be dead.

To increase awareness of possible mishaps over the break, students of the vocational department staged accidents in the parking lot to encourage others to stay safe and sober.

Students soon realized that this anticipated break only lasted a short week and would only come once a year. More importantly though, students got a needed vacation from the insanity called school. Near the approach of the holiday, students acted irritable and strange. Spring Break served as a way to protect the sanity of students and teachers.

"Without Spring Break, everyone would go crazy," junior Nikki Delleney said.

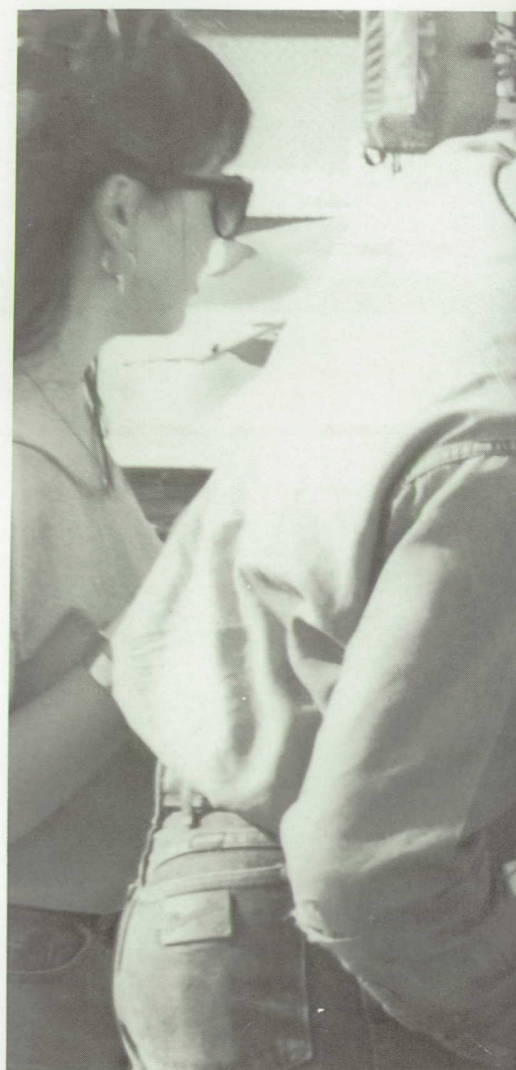

While some students went away on vacation, others just stayed close to home and relaxed. Some felt they had no choice and boredom took over.

"I thought Spring Break this year was boring because I don't have a car to take me places," sophomore Sara Mersiovsky said.

Several church groups as well as groups of students took trips. Some even braved the cold weather enough to go skiing. Students passed the time by fishing, boating, and just hangin' out outside when the sun was shining.

Most students agreed that it just did not last long enough.

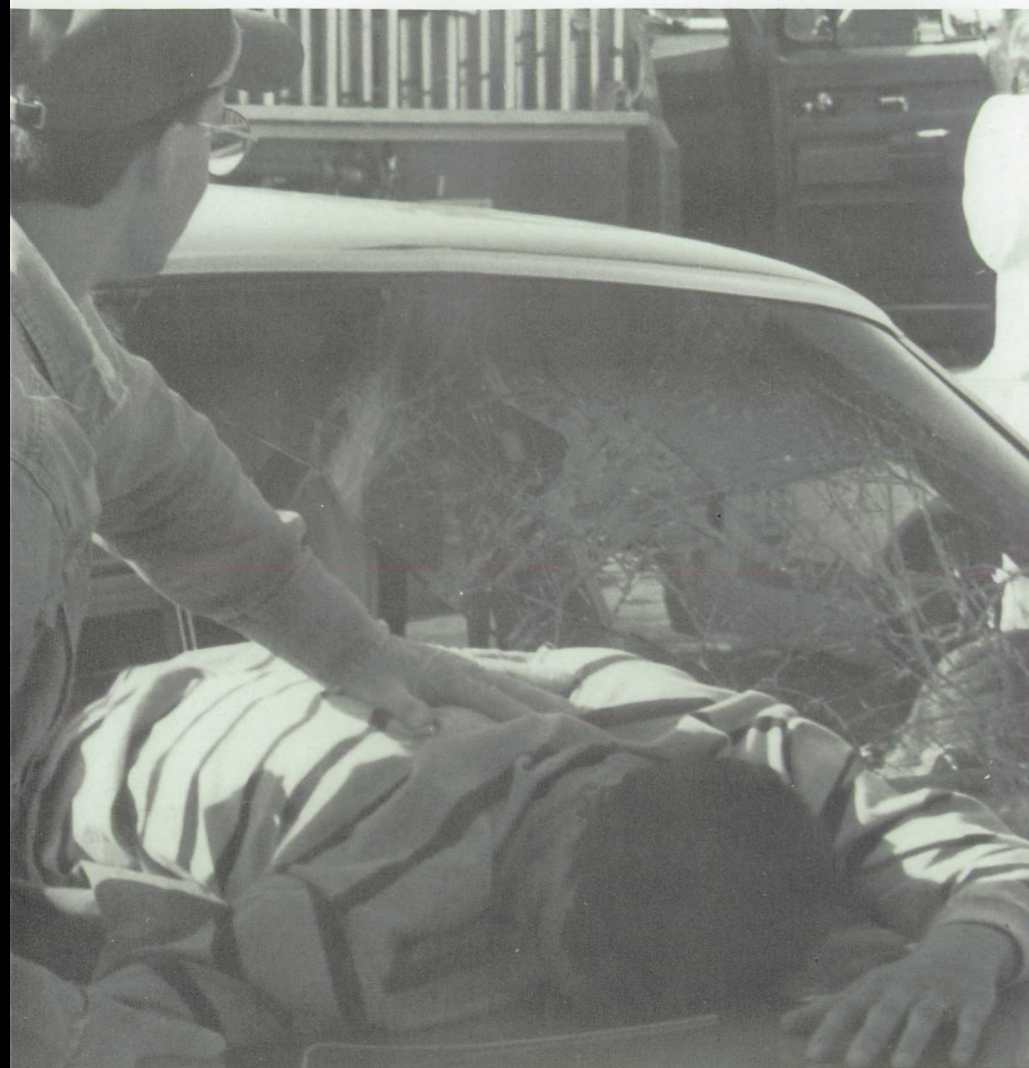

"I think we need another one," senior Lisa Sutton said. by Laura Low

DANCIN' THE NIGHT AWAY: Dancing around their campfire, juniors Shannon Stonebraker, Shelley Holmes, Felicity Sagan, and Shannon Marion enjoy their time away from school with a camping trip to Stevenville.

Speak Easy

A pass word for prom

Heated excitement filled the air as guys rushed to order tuxedos and gals hurried to the malls to buy dresses and all of the accessories.

Many girls traveled far and wide in search of dresses that would be unique to the prom. Guys on the other hand went to the nearest rental shop.

"Renting a tux for the first time was really an experience," junior Blake Hilstrom said. "It was getting the shoes that was the hard part."

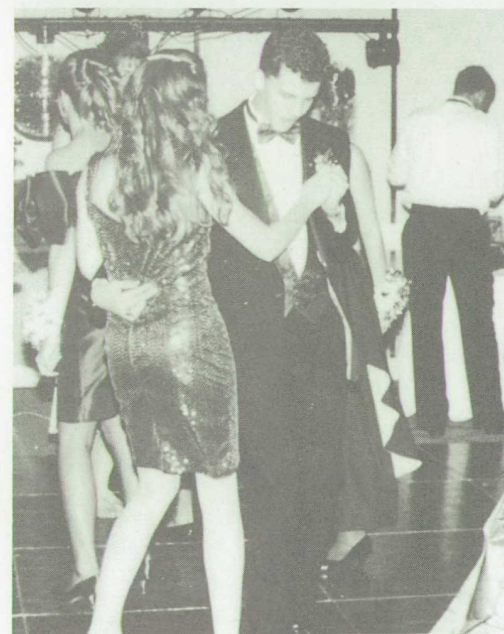

Taking time out on the morning before prom, sophomores, juniors, and seniors made a trip to Austin to decorate for the night's coming events. Props consisted of an old Model A car, balloons, beads, flowers and mannequins dressed to the Roaring Twenties theme.

"Prom was a lot of fun," junior Ryan Stonebreaker said. "I liked the old car and all of the decorations."

As prom day turned to prom night, clean cars, tuxes, and dresses were seen all around town. After all of the dinners were eaten and pictures were taken, the night had only just begun.

"It was really nice seeing every one all dressed up," junior Brandon Couch said. by Amanda Stone

FOLLOW THE LEADER: On the dance floor junior Todd Snead leads his partner through an intricate step.

AND THAT'S THE WAY IT WAS: Taking a look at history, senior Jennifer Jackson inspects the artwork that depicts the Roaring Twenties, the theme of the prom. The mural added authenticity to the setting.

THE "GRAPE" GATSBY: From the vine senior Aldo Bohm downs a few grapes. A buffet table offered different foods for the hungry prom goers.

HOORAY!! To express their excitement, graduating seniors throw their caps into the air and hug their friends. Graduation rewarded all students for their hard work.

MY FELLOW STUDENTS: As Valedictorian Jonathon Phillips delivers his speech to the crowd, all stare in amazement. Phillips achieved the title of valedictorian for having the highest GPA in the senior class.

ALL MUST LEARN TO GIVE: While describing his own experiences, Salutatorian Geoffrey Moran captures the attention of all in attendance and shows that to benefit others people must learn how to give of themselves.

HAPPY DAYS ARE HERE AGAIN! To share in the happiness of all graduates, principals Jack Sharp and Gary Crowell hand out diplomas, while Superintendant Jim Gunn and others look on.

Congratulations!!

Graduation rewards efforts

As the final speech came to an end, the graduating seniors knew the moment they had been waiting for had finally arrived. When Principal Gary Crowell made the announcement that the graduating class of 1993 had completed the ceremony, a wave of sound erupted from all as hands clapped and caps flew into the air.

"I admit I did not really throw my hat," senior Elizabeth Pope said. "I knew everyone else would and I did not want to go searching around for it afterwards."

Special speakers for the event, Superintendent Jim Gunn, retiring president of the school board Charles Steger, along with the new president Jeff Morrow, all expressed their congratulations and wishes for the future of each student.

Salutatorian Geoffrey Moran gave a moving speech likening help he had received during school to the story of "The Giving Tree" and showed that to gain joy in life all must be willing to give of themselves as others give freely.

Valedictorian Jonathon Phillips delivered his message with an unexpected surprise for the crowd.

"Please forgive me, but I cannot turn my back on my friends and fellow students," Phillips said. "So I must turn my back to the crowd."

Phillips talked about the wonderful privileges that awaited each student and hoped they would not seek out the damaging things in life, but work for what would make them happy.

After each of the senior class officers gave their congratulations, all senior choir members sang the senior song "Never Say Goodbye."

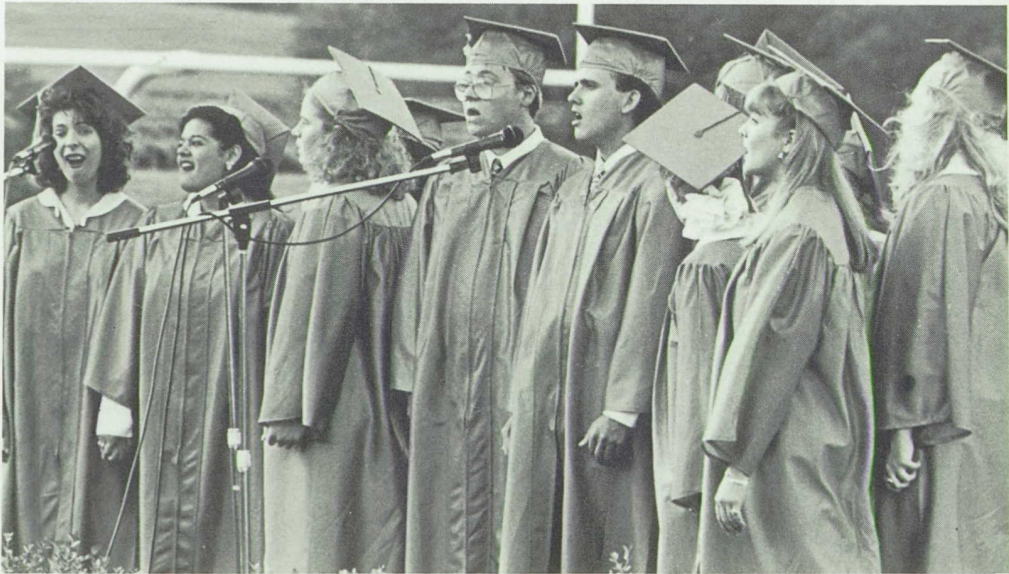

Then the moment arrived for students to receive their diplomas and "walk the field." A special privilege was given to senior class principal, Jack Sharp, to hand out each students' diploma.

As each student received a certificate and the school song was sung, some could not believe that this moment had come so quickly. Others realized they would miss their friends, but everyone eagerly looked forward to celebrating their newfound freedom.

"Graduation went by so fast," senior Amy Patterson said. "All at once the music started, and before we knew it, we were all standing with our parents afterward."

All of the dreams collected from students' first days in school finally came true and all of the hard work endured throughout the years payed off for all graduating on the 29th of May.

ARE YOU NERVOUS? While enjoying their new freedoms, seniors Erin Leedy and Lori Benningfield say their goodbyes. Most friends realized they would miss each other more than school.

Reading and Writing

Learning continues to enhance lives

English class—an often challenging but fun required course. All students in their high school career had to obtain four credits worth of English classes in order to graduate with their class.

"I really enjoy learning about English," senior Carter Delleney said. "I do not mind taking it because I know I will need it when I get into the 'real' world."

English classes taught essential grammar and writing techniques to prepare students for the skills needed later in life.

"Literature is so rich with experiences and knowledge that I think all students need to be in touch with all literary works," English teacher Teresa Cavender said.

The curriculum of each English class generally included the same areas of study with some teachers spending more time on certain aspects of English more than others.

Some teachers even assigned appropriate projects or had class discussions to enhance the ability for students to understand what they read, and to allow each student's uniqueness to shine forth.

"Too often literature is taught as something to be read and that's it," student teacher Allen Salerno said. "To me literature should be experienced. It should be implied, talked about."

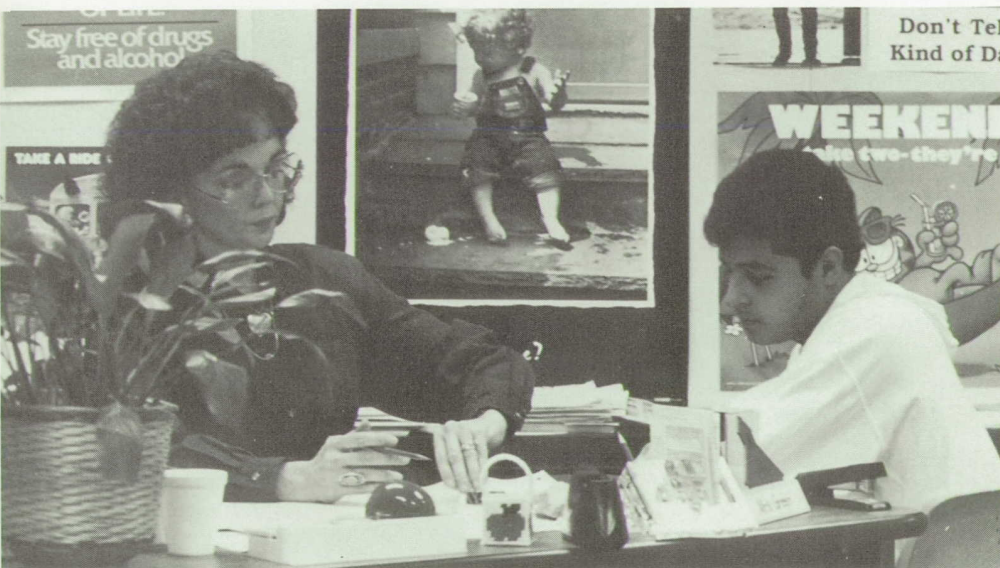

Discussions on different novels, authors, as well as poetry prevailed in these classes.

"I enjoyed reading so many interesting and enriching novels. Not!" junior Laurie Payne said.

The course of teaching used by the English department presented a new and exciting change from other classes.

"English is my favorite class," sophomore Dixie Hendley said. "It keeps my imagination going."

On the Job Training

Business classes prepare for future

When the time came to pick electives, several students decided to take a class in the business field. Some, not knowing exactly what to expect, signed up because their parents said it would be very beneficial for them in the future. By learning the basics of typing, record keeping, personal business management, or accounting, students learned a skill that would come in handy no matter what they ended up doing.

Most companies use computers for everything. Learning how the different computer programs operated gave students a head start when they began looking for jobs.

"Most businesses these days use computers and programs," sophomore Marion Neary said. "My computer class gets you prepared for such jobs."

If students were not interested in the computer courses, then they could choose from one of the other business classes. Several ended up typing or keyboarding just to have the skill for future needs.

"I took typing because I enjoy typing," senior Jon Marc Zedlitz said. "For some reason I find it fun and interesting."

Knowing such a basic skill as typing paid off when it came time for reports and other major writing assignments. The students had the ability to sit down at a computer and get the work completed quickly.

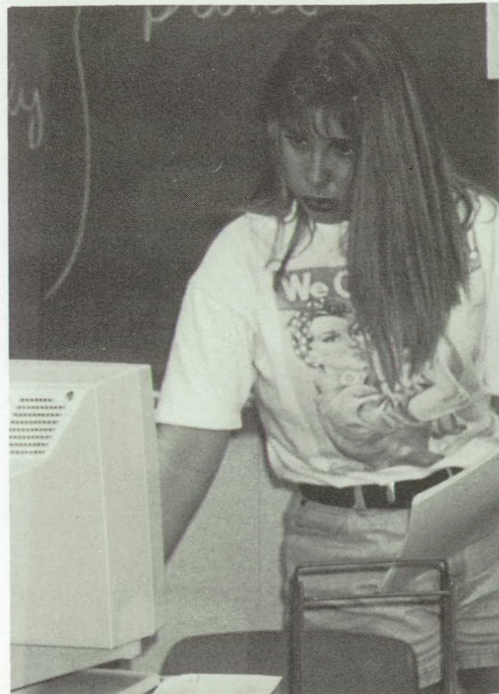

By taking up half a year or all of one, students learned something they could never forget, a skill that would not go unused.

"We have learned a skill that will help prepare us for the future in many ways," senior Adriene Kolly said.

It All Adds Up

Students work to get good grades

When entering school, some students became lost in the math system because they did not know what math classes to take or when to take them.

The unusual idea of taking two math classes in one year helped those who hoped to reach their own goals of a specific class by their senior year.

Some students found themselves not caring about having a real math goal and just did the required four years.

"I'm taking four years of math because I have to, not because I want to," sophomore Jennifer Meyer said. "Besides, I don't like McDonalds uniforms."

Some students did not look forward to the upcoming year and harder classes.

"Everyone always says that if you are bad at algebra you will be good at geometry," sophomore Sara Mersiovsky said. "I hope that's true because I'm awful in Algebra II."

Other students like Mersiovsky looked forward to finishing the previous year.

Classes were often easy or hard depending on the teacher. Some students found that other teachers became more helpful than their own teacher and went to them for help during the tutorial period.

Students found their classes easier and often received better grades when their teachers explained the work and when they were willing to listen in class.

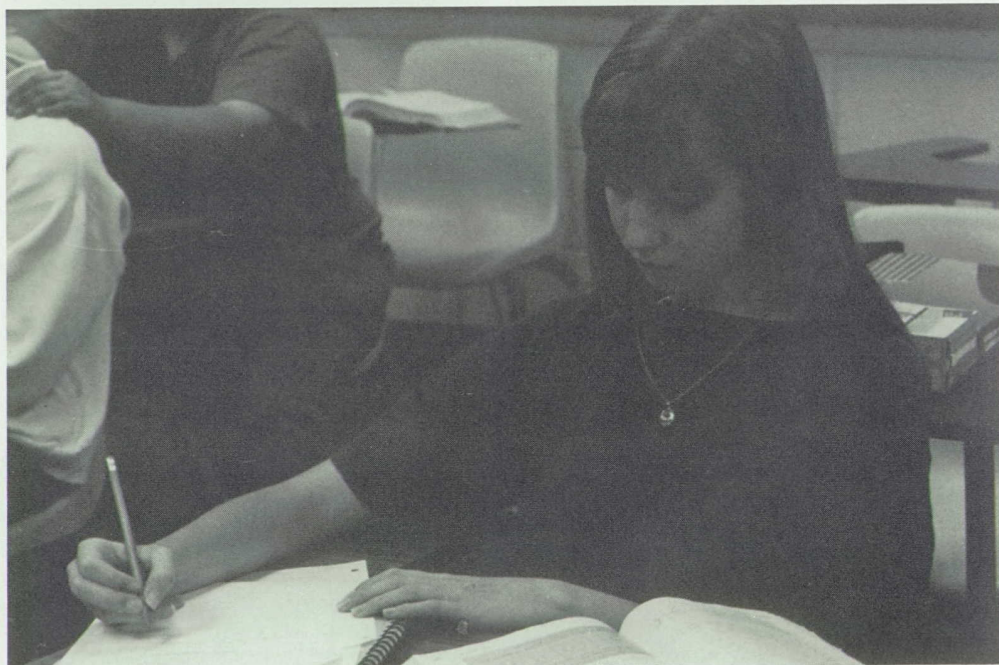

"Mrs. Reed knows what she's talking about and knows how to get the point across, but TAKE NOTES," senior DJ Lenartowicz said.

KA-BOOM!!!

Science, more than laws & measurements

Science used to be a class that just "had to be taken," but science expanded its horizons.

The science department offered a variety of science courses. Most freshmen started out in physical science, which served as an introduction to chemistry and physics.

Biology, usually taken by sophomores, covered everything from genetics, to the theory of evolution, to the five kingdoms of living organisms.

"Biology was fun. We did a lot of labs, and looked at a lot of cool things in the microscope," freshman Jesse Bryant said.

Chemistry, taken by anyone from a sophomore to a senior, consisted of equations, laws and many labs.

"I love chemistry," junior Travis Jones said. "It makes me feel like a mad scientist!"

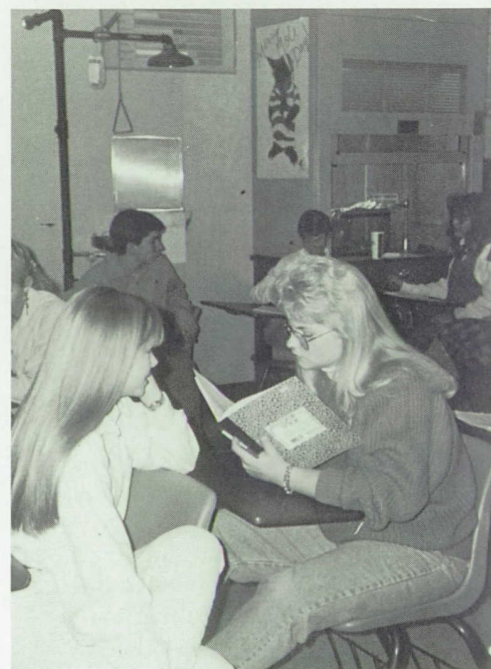

Students in physics, mostly juniors and seniors, learned everything from force and motion, work and energy, electricity and magnetism, light waves and sound, to radioactivity and nuclear energy.

More advanced students took AP biology, a very indepth study of anatomies of cells, and the biological structure of plants and animals.

Science courses allowed students to test different theories and to conduct different kinds of experiments.

Even though to graduate from high school, students only have to have two years of a science, many students enjoyed it and chose to take more.

"I think science is really cool," sophomore Misty Harris said. "I mean, what other class would let you grow your own bacteria!" by Kelley Schirmer

Show Time

German play wins third place at State

Traveling to Southwest Texas University to perform a skit played out entirely in German, a group of students spent a day in San Marcos rehearsing and carrying out their region-level foreign masterpiece.

"We started the play because we thought it would be an easy way to get extra credit, but it was more than that!" junior Jacy Warwick said. "It was really bad at first, but it turned out great and we won third!"

Students from German I and II classes devoted countless after-school hours to the play "Jurgen und der Bohnenbaum," a modern "Jack and the Beanstalk." In the weeks before the performance, students used every opportunity to rehearse and gather props, such as a leaf-covered step-ladder for a beanstalk, trench coats, and a fake pistol.

"The play was started to have fun, but it required a lot of hard work from everyone," said junior Shelley Schooley. "But it was worth all the stress it caused."

The trip began early on a cold Saturday morning and cast members tried not to fall asleep. Despite that, the play went smoothly and the judges marvelled at the use of good props by the cast.

The performance turned out far better than any rehearsal, except for the fact that the main character had to read his lines from his hands.

"The first time we performed the skit, it was kind of a joke, but when we found out that we were going to state we got serious—almost," junior Jessica Harwell said.

The play advanced and performers repeated it at the University of Texas Campus in Austin on Saturday, February 17, where it won third place.

Even though some of the original actors could not participate in the State-level competition, the cast felt that the many cliches in the play added to its overall quality. The ending State-level performance went better than any previous performance with problems with the original script worked out.

One Step Ahead

Vocational takes step toward future

To better prepare themselves for the future, students enrolled in vocational classes. These classes included Applied Technology, Welding, Auto Mechanics, and Home Economics.

Principals of Technology, an applied physics course, taught students the concepts of force, work, rate, resistance, energy, and their relation to mechanical, fluid, electrical, and thermal systems.

"Being a part of this class is a great experience," senior Mike Grimes said. "It is a time consuming class, but it teaches a variety of things."

In the welding class, students learned how to build projects, and work repairing metal. Students became prepared for entry level jobs in the welding trades field upon completion of this course.

Students learned that by working together they could get the job done.

Girls realized they could do just as well as the guys.

"Most people don't think girls can handle this kind of course, but we're not having any problems," senior Kelly Gallagher said.

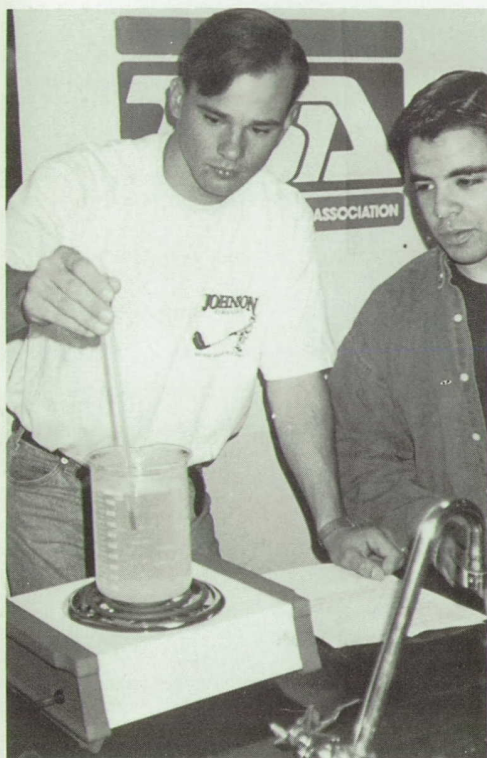

Along with the vocational classes, Auto Mechanics taught students how to care for and make their own cars along with similar mechanical operations.

For both males and females, Home Economics taught students how to learn about the concepts of life, both in the kitchen and around the house.

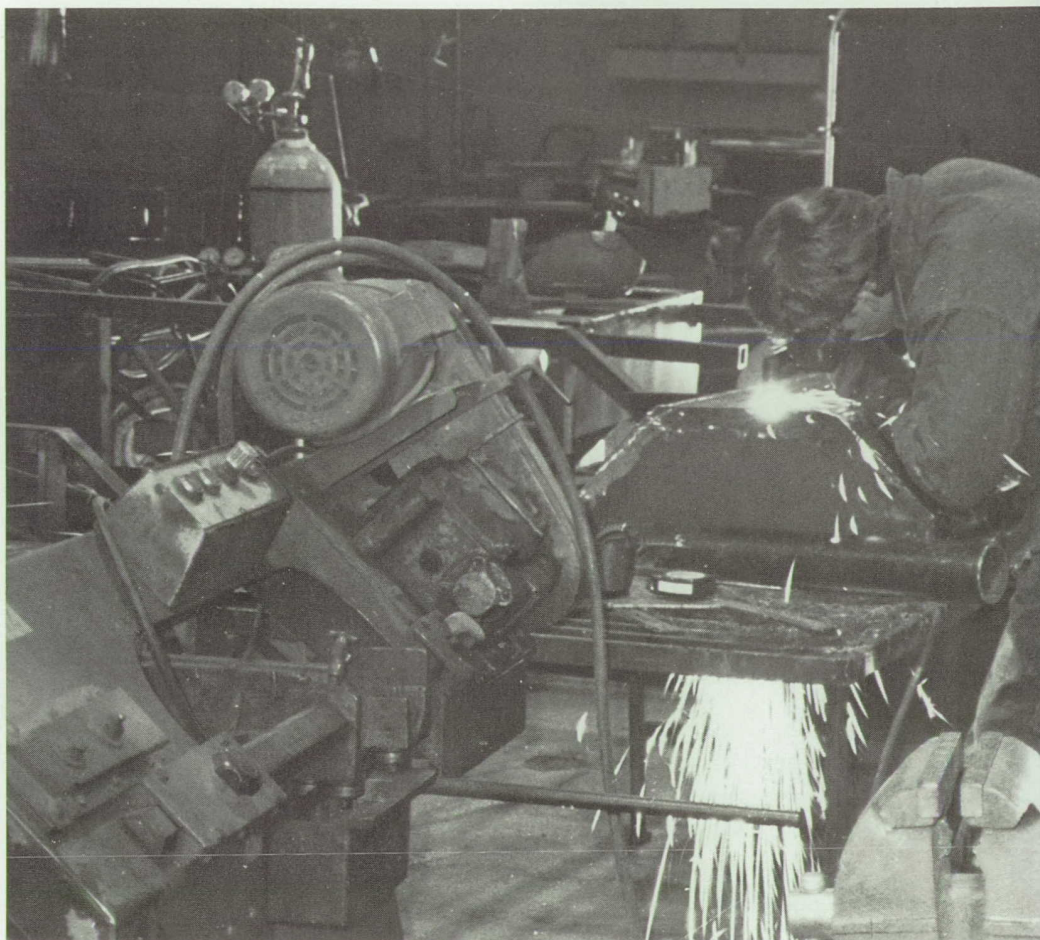

"I learned how to take care of babies and handle the different pressures of life," sophomore Brittany Sizemore said.

As a rule, vocational classes provided students with essential skills needed for their futures.

Stars Bright

Academics accentuated

Governor Ann Richards sent her best wishes - with the official seal. Former TV sportscaster Hugh Lewis emceed the ceremony.

Dressed in candlelight, the auditorium of the junior high sparkled, but when the ceremonies began for the Academic Excellence Reception, some of its stars had not appeared.

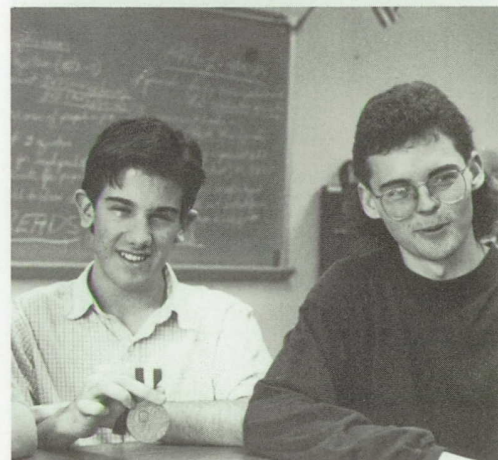

Taking place on the same Saturday, April 24, as the University Scholastic League Literary Regional meet in San Antonio, the reception began before some of the honorees had returned.

"We were late leaving San Antonio because of a problem with the judging in one of the competitions," current events sponsor Diane Smith said.

All four regional winners who advanced to State competition also qualified for the academic reception named "The Brightest Stars in Texas" by the steering committee of the Academic Booster Club.

To qualify, students had to achieve academic rank in the top of their class. Forty-six seniors, 41 juniors, 30 sophomores and 25 freshmen met the requirements. In addition 19 teachers, selected by their peers, received recognition.

Many of these same students participated in UIL literary events, four of whom went on to State competition. Those placing in the top two or three positions at district advanced to region competition. Those placing in the top six at district received letter jackets.

USING THEIR BRAINS: As members of the computer team, senior Eddie Swartz and junior Kevin Hausenfluke show one of their many medals. With senior Chris Starling the trio captured second at UIL State and first place in another state competition.

WE DID IT! After the ceremony that recognized academic stars, seniors Chris Starling, Khrrisslyn Goodman and Ella Bredthauer discuss their dash from UIL competition to the academic reception. As part of the computer team, Starling had won at region and advanced to State.

VERY NICE: As they leave the reception, Master of Ceremonies Hugh Lewis and his wife talk with Rebecca Pfister, a member of the steering committee for the Academic Excellence reception. Sixteen other members of the Academic Booster Club served on the reception committee headed by Nancy Kelly.

TOGETHER AT PLAY: To organize their groups, seniors gather for their challenge day activities. After a rainy start, the day ended with sunshine.

Preparing for their after high school experiences in child care related areas, students in the 2+2 Early Childhood class enhanced their skills in relating to children.

"It helps me in my expectations of what it will be like in an Early Child Profession," senior Shannon Newman said.

For this course students received college credit, acceptable at some colleges. In 2+2, a two hour block, students learned about children and how to care and relate to them. Two days a week 2+2 students went to various daycares to work with children, hands on.

"2+2 has given me many hands on experiences and adult perspectives in dealing with children," junior Jeniffer Chapman said.

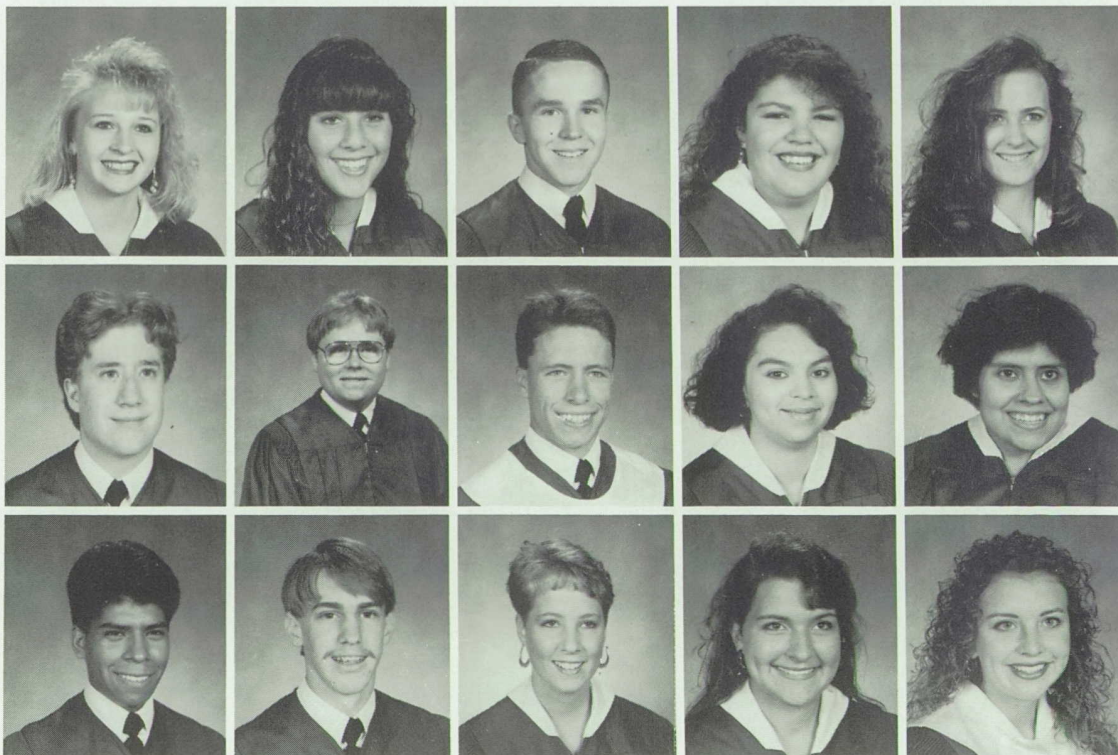

Requirements consisted of being a junior or senior. Students could take it for two years in the classes Early Childhood Professions I and II.

"It is helping my students to learn the various Early Childhood Professions and to be involved with children," teacher Kathy Keller said. by Allison Barnett

Looking Back

Laura as a freshman

When I was a freshman, I was so dumb. I am not referring to my I.Q., but to my level of maturity. Experience has taught me that things that were so important to me then have little value to me now.

As a freshman, I never left the house without my make-up on and my hair curled and sprayed solid with hair spray. Needless to say, I placed appearance first among my priorities.

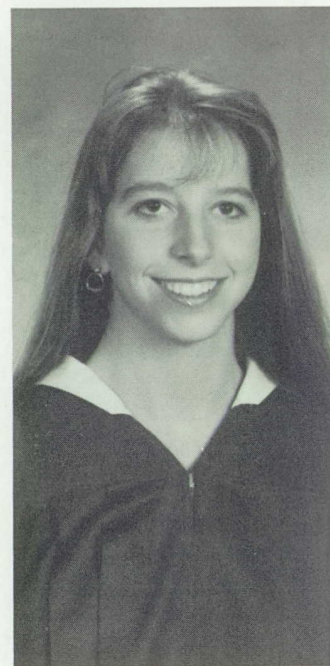

When I look back now, I realize just how silly it all was. When I get ready for school now, I take a shower and go! The older I get, the more I realize just how little other's opinions of me matter.

After four years of high school, I have come to the realization that if a person is too shallow to see beyond appearances, their friend-ship is not worth the time or the effort.

I'm sure a similar thing happens to most people as they attend school. It's called--growing up.

Maybe the changes others go through do not resemble mine at all, but some sort of change must occur from the time spent as a freshman to the time spent as a senior for a person to be ready to graduate from high school and face the world. by Laura Low

Laura as a senior

Warm or Cold, Which Way Will It Be?

The weather in December and January stayed a little on the warm side.

Students often woke up to the voices of weathermen predicting 60 degree weather for the early morning. At times the temperature would drop to possibly 30 degrees, and rain would blow in.

This caused many heads to turn up and gaze into the sky, searching for at least one little snowflake, but it never happened.

"I don't mind it being cold," sophomore Jana Phillips said. "I just wish that it would stop messing around and snow."

Sometimes there would just be rain, and allergies and sickness would kick in, causing a large number of students to miss school.

"I think the weather has been really nasty the past few weeks," sophomore Laura Miller said.

Some teachers and students began to get very tired of the winter and started watching for the sun. Some still kept hoping for the cold weather.

Students often got so determined that it would be cold during winter that they would wear shorts to school and beg their teachers to turn down the air conditioner.

"It wasn't even cold enough for me," sophomore Jennifer Riker said.

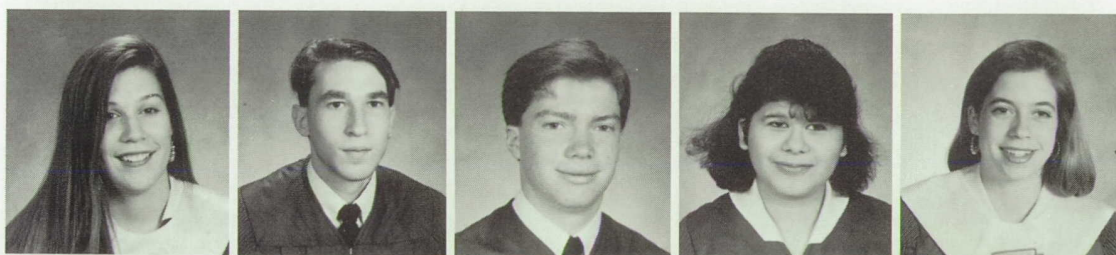

by Sabrina Teinert

WHAT SHOULD I WEAR? In the middle of December, senior DJ Lenartowicz sits comfortably in shorts in his Algebra class. Warm natured students, in the cold of win ter, found that wearing shorts to school became more comfortable than wearing jeans or any other warm clothes. photo by Sabrina Teinert

Weather Challenges Challenge Day

With a clap of thunder and a cloud of rain overhead, the day started. Seniors feared that they would spend their specially planned day in the gym. First, the panoramic picture needed to be taken. For the first time ever, the rain forced it to be taken inside. After what seemed like hours, the picture-taking concluded. The time had come to decide what the next plan would be.

As if by miracle, the rain lifted and the sun began to shine. The seniors were herded onto buses headed for Renunion Ranch.

Seniors finally had an entire day to act as crazy as they had been for the last few months of school. The administrators grouped the seniors into two separate groups. One group played games during the morning hours while the others listened to a speaker on the topic of "Your Rights and Responsibilities Now That You Are 18." After lunch, catered by Domino's Pizza, the groups reversed and those who had played earlier listened to the speaker and vice versa.

Many seniors had mixed emotions about the way the administrators handled the games. The students had to play the games that the administrators provided for them early in the day, but got to play volleyball and other games by themselves later in the afternoon.

"The volleyball was fun! I don't think they should have made the seniors play those games," senior Tracy Ischy said. "They should have let them run free."

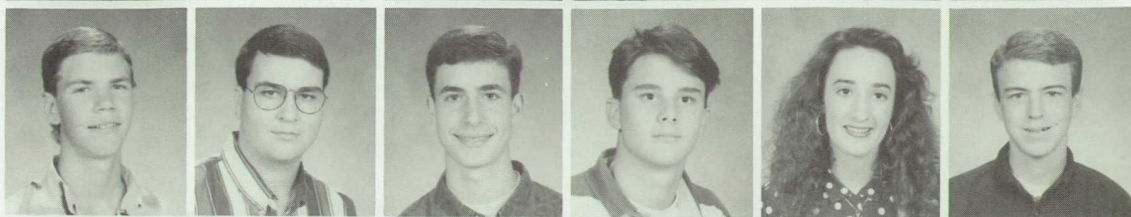

Some seniors expected the worst from the school-sponsored event. Several were surprised when they actually had a good time.

"I thought it was going to be worse than it actually was," senior Jackie Hoover said. by Laura Low

Beyond the Weekend

For many students, finalizing weekend plans could be difficult enough, but what about college planning?

It was a decision everyone was faced with. To go or not to go. That was the question. But what was the answer?

"No! I'm not ready for college," junior Lauren Moran said. "Not yet anyway."

Many students said they were going, but they wanted more time to prepare.

"Maybe a year off, just to think about it - yeah that's what I need," junior Lisa

Morton said. "I'm not sure where I want to go, and I have no idea what to take!"

Students felt that there were too many colleges to choose from. High school did not last long enough.

"At the end of the year, we say good-bye to seniors facing college and realize it's that much closer to us," junior Tina Lee said. "Whether you're definitely college bound, definitely not, or somewhere in the middle we are all looking onward, to tomorrow and beyond."

JUST PLUMB WORE OUT: While studying for a semester test, junior Nick Arab has just about called it quits. With the new exemption policy for juniors and seniors, depending on grades and absences, not everyone had to take all tests. photo by Sara Mersiovskys

Semester Tests ...

Semester tests were something that not everyone looked forward to taking. Some students liked taking them while others would have rather eaten dirt.

"They are awful and I don't think we should have to take them," sophomore Angie Patton said.

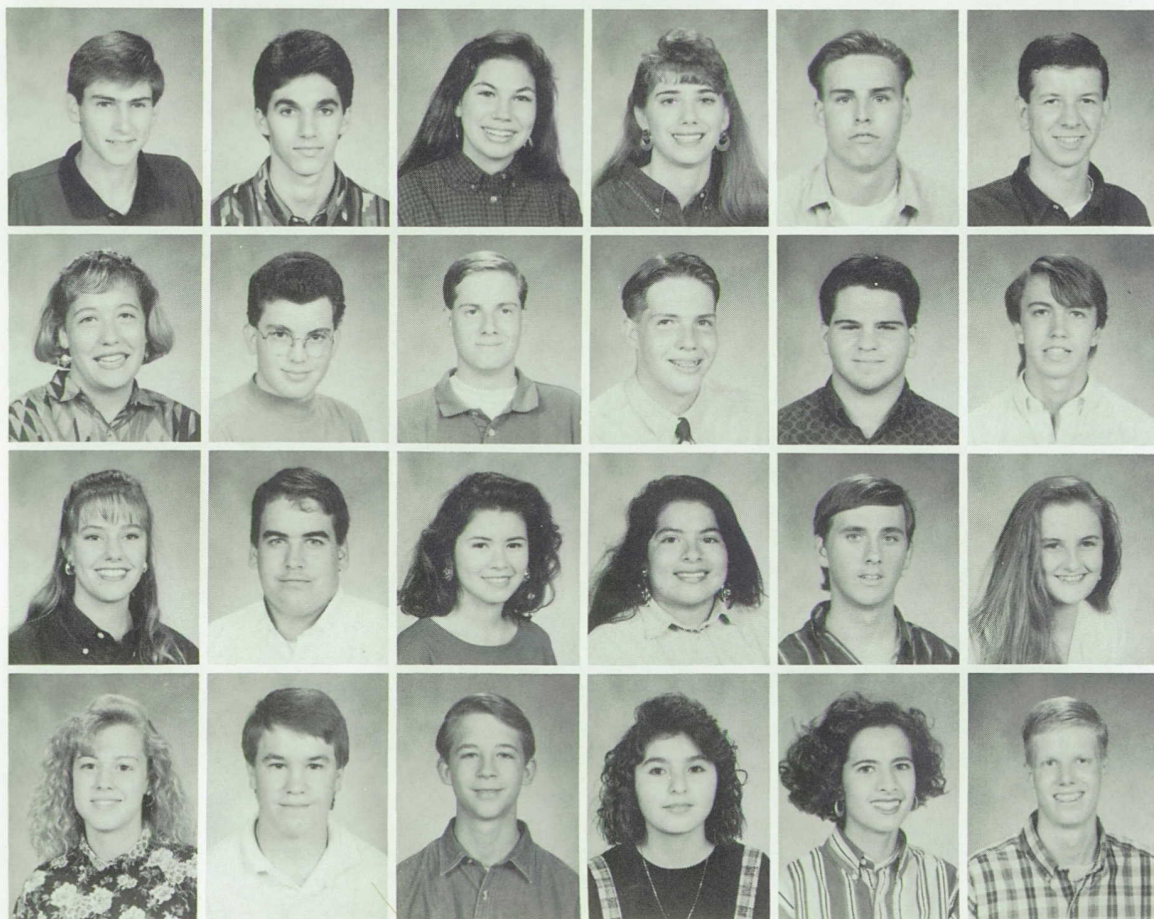

With the new exemption policy, juniors and seniors no longer had to take semester tests for courses of just one semester or at the end of the year. As long as students had a certain grade and few absences and tardies, juniors and seniors remained exempt from taking finals.

"I think the exemption policy is good," senior Alison Mersiovsky said. "It makes students try their hardest to make good grades and be in school everyday."

Most students thought that semester tests were a bad idea and caused too much trouble.

"I think they put you under a lot of stress," sophomore Sarah Nahay said. "We should just have six weeks tests."

Six weeks tests depended on whether or not the teacher decided to give them. by Sara Mersiovsky-

Morning Blues

Waking up could be difficult for most students in the morning. After a long night of studying and doing homework, few felt like getting up.

"I like to sleep until 12:00 because I need my beauty sleep," junior Missy Thomas said.

Students needed that little something to get up and go. Many people needed a candy bar or coke to give them that boost.

"Eating Doritos gives me that lift I need for first period," sophomore Casey Hickerson said.

By the end of the day, everyone's ready to go home and wait for the next day to come. It's exactly like kindergarden, high school students need that nap after lunch.

"I don't look forward to school because now that I have a job, I'm always tired," junior Dyron Taylor said. "I feel like I can never get enough sleep."

Taking Precautions

Fire drills, bomb threats, tornado drills, being prepared, that was the name of the game. In the course of the year, the student body participated in several precaution awareness drills.

"I think drills are a very good idea. Without them we would not know what to do if the situation did occur," junior Michelle Hancock said.

A number of fire drills took place where the students and faculty had been timed to see how long it would take to exit the building.

Certain exits had been blocked to see if the students and teachers knew an alternative way to leave the building.

"Getting out of class is the best part of a drill," freshman Krista Watson said. Other than having fire drills, the school also participated in a serious bomb threat drill, where the students found themselves along with faculty outside for close to an hour.

After drills students felt more secure about what to do in case of an emergency.

Sophomore Principal Guides with Humor

Assistant principal Brenton Hughes worked with his students, sophomores, and faculty members. He took time and really listened to what they had to say.

"Mr. Hughes is very understanding," sophomore Trish Tate said.

Mr. Hughes tried to get along with all the students and to help the ones who needed it. He joked around to put students at ease.

"Mr. Hughes is funny and has a very good sense of humor," sophomore Nicole Paggi said.

The teachers and other principals respected Mr. Hughes and the way he worked. They liked the way he felt for the students.

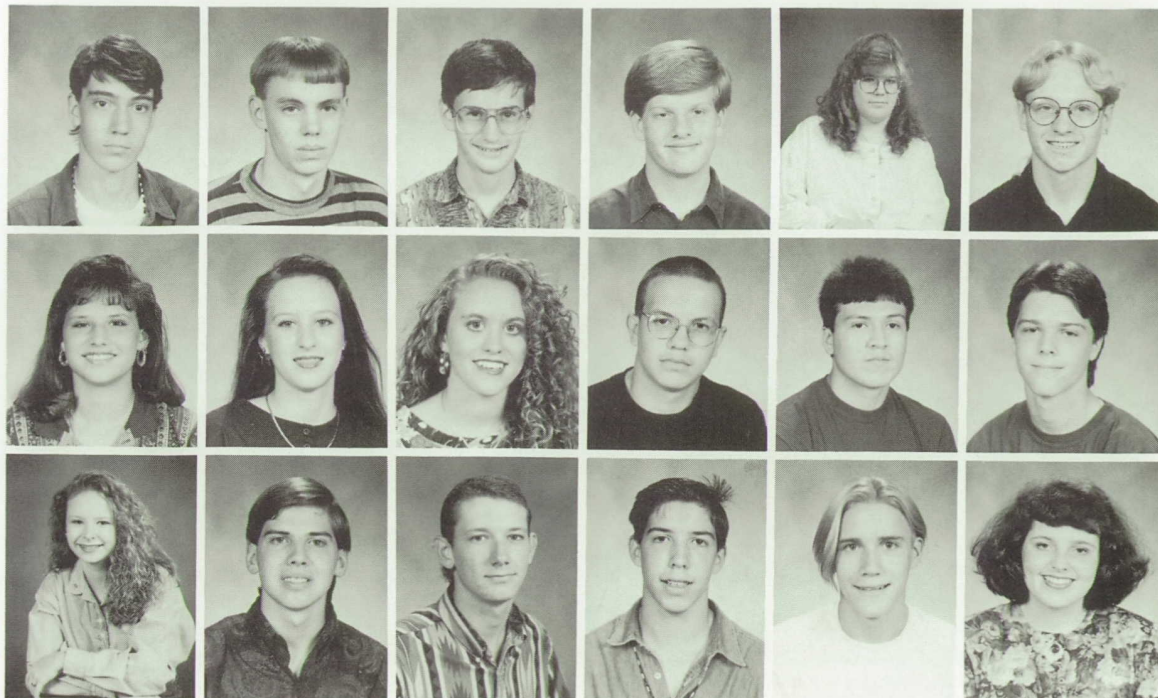

"Mr. Hughes tries to do the best job he can, and he cares about the students," typing teacher Dee Starr said.

After School Talks, Visits, and Gossip

For various reasons some students stayed after school to visit, or to catch up on the latest gossip. Before leaving for the day, students hung out in the cafeteria or in the south wing to talk about their day.

"My mom comes and picks me up when she gets off work at 5:00, so I have time to talk to my friends for a while," sophomore Angie Blass said.

Students who did not have a ride home stayed after school and talked while they waited for their ride home. Or there might have been a particular practice after school, and students had time to visit a little.

"I usually did not stay after because my sister had to work, but during volleyball season I had time for a quick chat," sophomore Brittany Powers said.

RAH RAH TEAM: After school, behind the school, sophomores Kristie Ratley and Megan Inerney go

Also some students stayed after for teachers or for club meetings, so they could chat for a while.

"I like to stay after and talk over the cheers they learned at camp over the summer. All three squads participated in a National Cheer-to my friends before I go home," sophomore Danielle Iwers said. "It is just a fun thing to do."

Getting into the Class

"I SAID . . . SIT DOWN!" During an A.P. Biology class, teacher Jeanie Jacob pulls out her dart gun. Teachers took up toys throughout the year. photo by Andrew Bacelis

The average teacher's school day started off with getting organized. Teaching materials, such as handouts and worksheets, needed to be ready to be passed out to the parade of students who would come in and out their doors for the remainder of the day.

"It is never a good idea to procrastinate," English teacher Brenda Finstad said. "Because invariably the copy machine will be broken."

After the bell had rung, keeping students quiet and in their seats long enough to hear some of the day's announcements proved to be a difficult challenge for some teachers. Even with teaching five classes, having parent, teacher and child conferences, and being evaluated by principals, most teachers still found the energy to participate and show their spirit and spunk in their classes. by Amanda Stone

School Board Leads Way

Every third Monday of the month, the School Board met to pass out compliments, hear complaints and to establish policy.

At the May session, the board recognized students who excelled in academics and athletics and scheduled summer budget workshops.

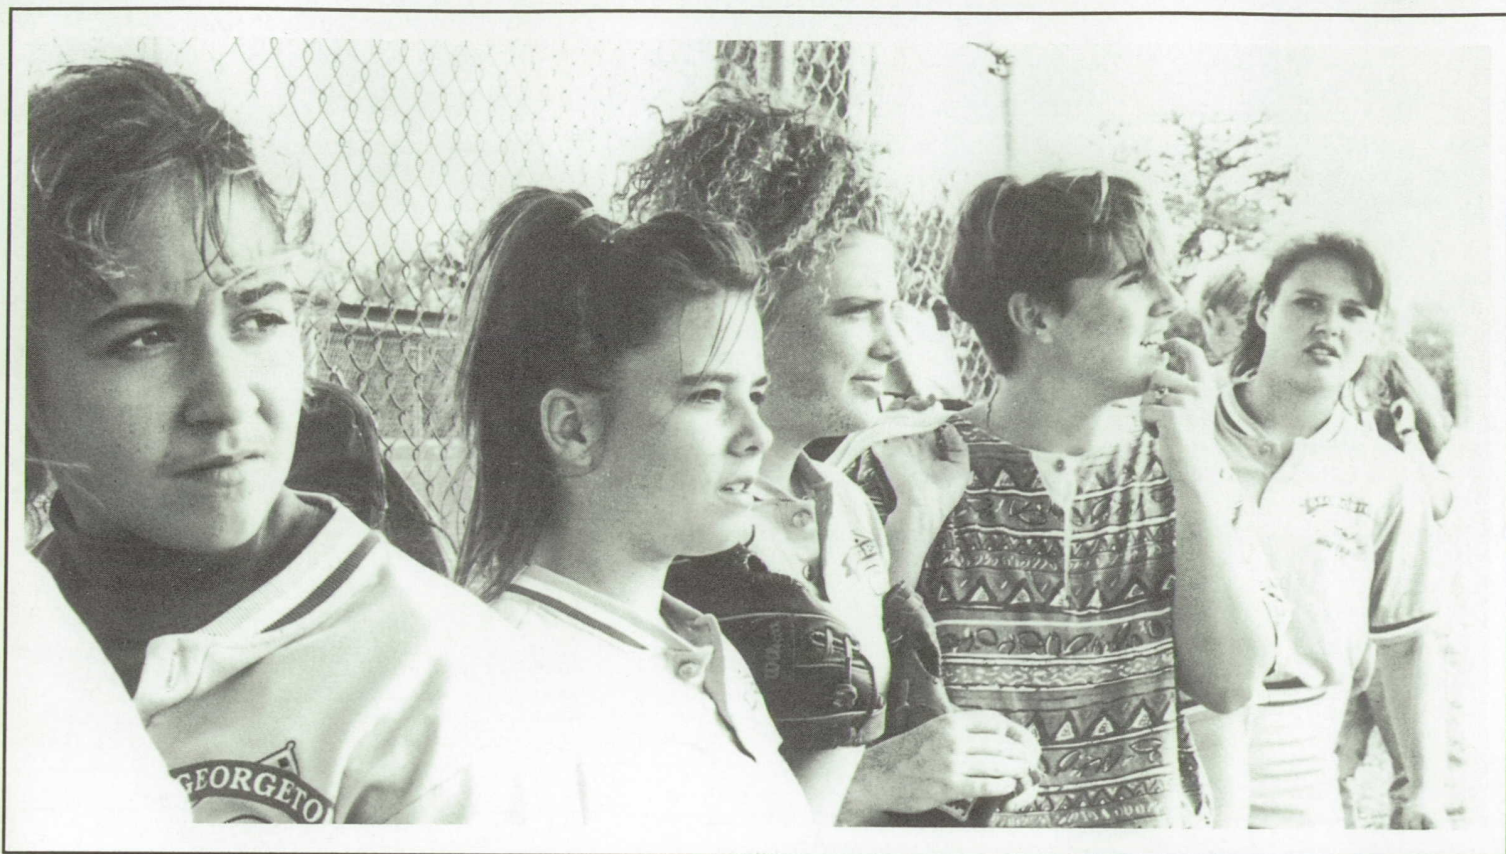

THE NAME'S THE THING: For a dozen years of service as a member of the School Board, outgoing President Charles Steger receives a street sign with his name during the May board meeting. The street between the new sixth grade school and the junior high will be named for Steger who retired from the board in May.

TOGETHER, A TEAM

Linking the Chains

They came, they raced, they conquered

Just when spectators and other teams concluded that the boys cross country team had fallen off its rocker, one team proved that seven boys, a crazy coach, and a ridiculous tactic would leave other teams in the dust.

The squad competed in pre-district meets with few solid team efforts, but achieved only one victory at the season opener in Waco. But when regionals rolled around, they were armed with a district championship under their belts, new uniforms, links of a bicycle chain, and a new tactic.

Alone as one link, a unit cannot be moved, but all the links together will, like a chain, move a bicycle.

On a crisp mid-morning at the University of Texas at San Antonio campus, the starter fired the gun.

All seven links, seniors Chris Harney, John Martin, Robbie Bacchus, and Otay Martinez, juniors David Boram and Rob Trostle, and sophomore Robb Cabaniss jogged off slowly behind the rest of the race.

"We thought they were crazy," varsity runner freshman Charlotte Graham said.

Fifteen minutes later, an army of Eagle blue in cadence, step by step, finished the race very near the front.

Team members earned a gold medal and respect from competitors and spectators alike. They defeated Beeville Jones on the basis of the sixth runner, Robb Cabaniss, who finished ahead of Beeville's sixth man, but the next weeks race at the State meet, held at Southwestern University yielded a repeat performance. The squad clenched second place behind a fiery A and M Consolidated team.

"We did great. It was a great way to end my senior year," senior Robbie Bacchus said. "Georgetown will remember us."

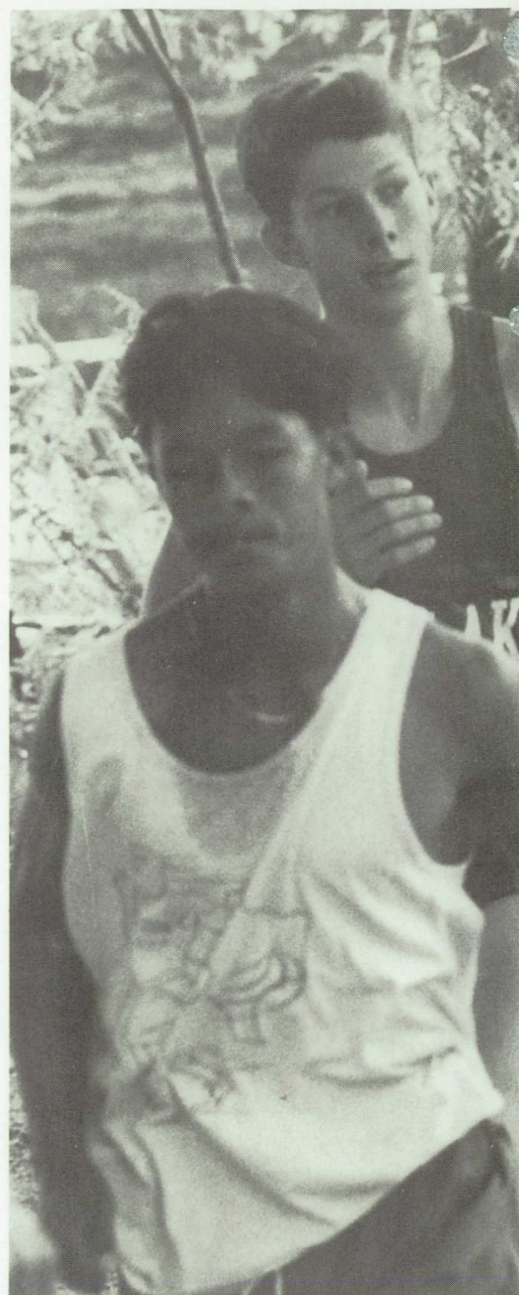

The girls cross country team became very involved in supporting the boys on their quest. Cheering at races, painting signs, and rallying support helped to build special friendships.

"I got to be good friends with Layne, Jen, Marlane and all the girls," sophomore Robb Cabaniss said.

The varsity girls team agreed.

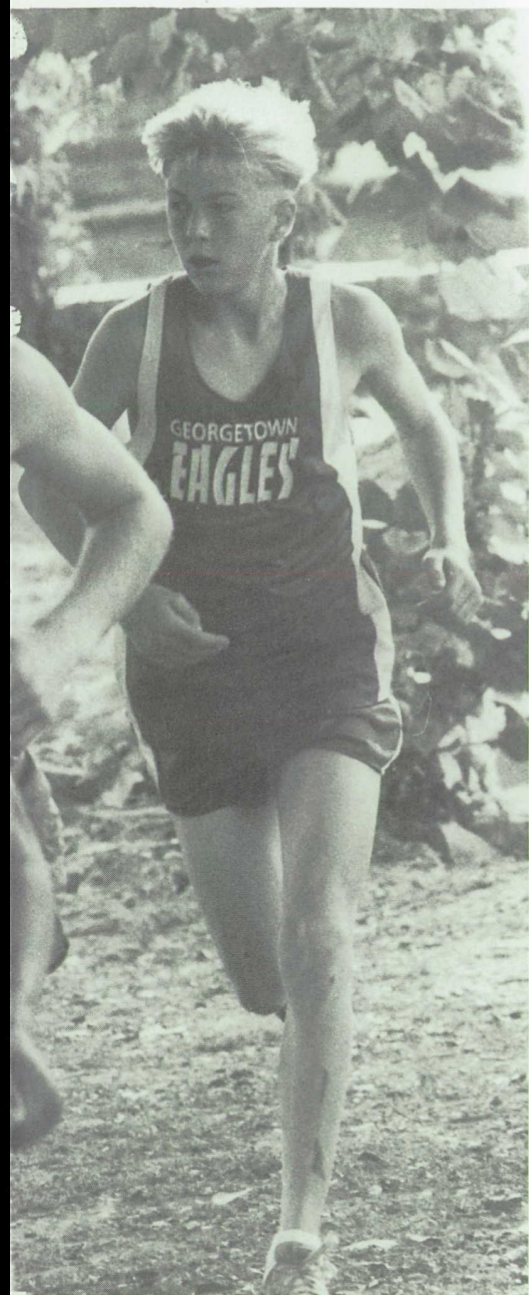

"It was an up and down season for us, I gained friends and had fun," sophomore Jennifer French said. "Our team really supported the boys, who really became our friends."

New Coach, High Hopes

Volleyball Overcomes Obstacles

Along with adjusting to a new coach, the varsity volleyball team fell upon bad luck while the junior varsity and freshman teams conquered all the teams in their district.

With new coach Paty Esparza-Elliott, the varsity Lady Eagles beat many challenging opponents in their pre-district play, but in mid-district, senior Laura Hanner, a valuable player, could no longer play due to mono.

"It did affect the team initially, but eventually they pulled together and realized that they still had their own ability to win a game," Coach Esparza-Elliott said.

Although the Lady Eagles lost a vital part of their team, this did not effect their ability to play together.

"The girls did a good job playing together especially since some of them were playing together for the first time," Coach Esparza-Elliott said. "As the season progressed the team's unity increased. I wish I could have had them all one more year."

The team did not go as far as members had wished, but ended up with 21-13 overall record and a 6-4 district record.

"Getting a new volleyball coach was really exciting. She had a lot of really good ideas and a positive attitude that helped our team," senior Eowyn

Buchan said. "We did not go as far this year as we wanted, but the program should grow in the future under Coach Esparza-Elliott."

While the varsity fell short of their expectations, the junior varsity swept their district.

The team composed of 13, 2 juniors and 11 sophomores, had a distict record of 9-1 and a 21-6 overall. While on the path to claiming the title of district champs, the junior varsity took the hard road by playing three sets for most of their games.

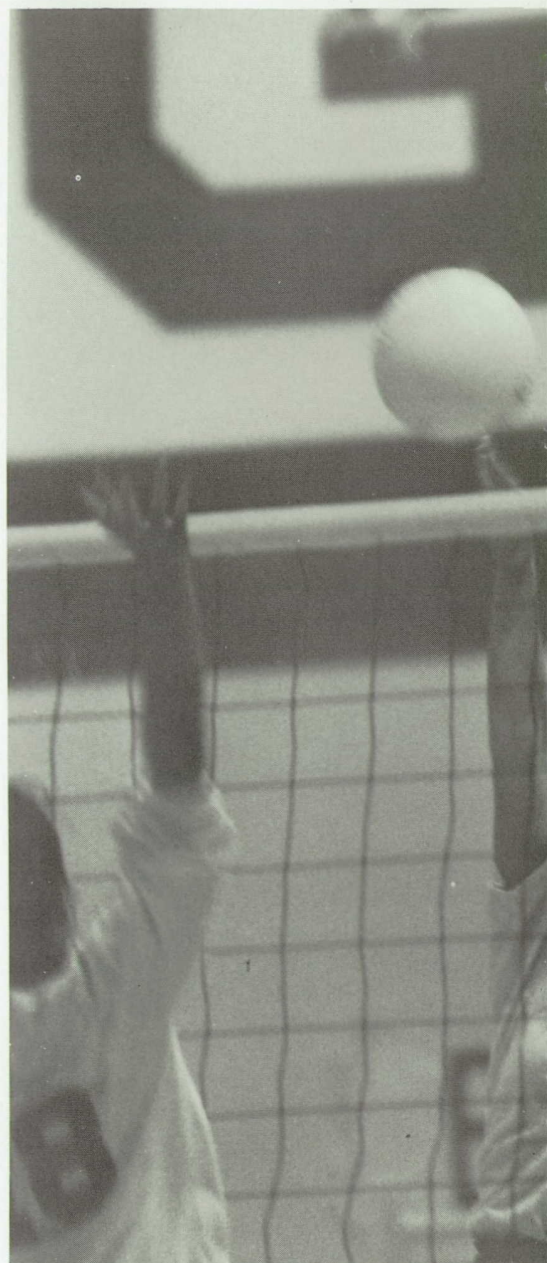

"This year was great! We ended up district champs even though we played three sets every game to get there," sophomore Angie Patton said.

While being crowned district champions, the freshman volleyball players found that being a freshman wasn't as bad as they had planned.

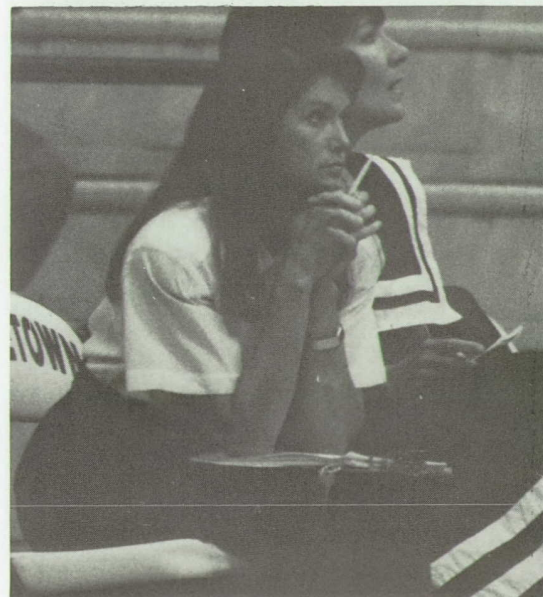

"Being a freshman volleyball player wasn't as bad as I thought," freshman Courtney Smith said. "Coach Spruill was great and taught us a lot and we became distict champs!"

The freshman's 22-9 overall record and 8-2 district record showed how hard work and dedication pay off.

Injuries Intensified

Varsity football season plagued

Football season 1992 was a season in which predictions were worth little more than the paper they were written on.

According to Dave Cambell's Texas Football Magazine, the Eagles were to finish second in district 25-AAAA and contend to playoffs. Sadly, enough this was not to be.

What coaches referred to as the worst rash of injuries to strike a team in ages, the Eagles lost many players to physical injury, probably the greatest contributor to the disappointing 3-7 season.

"We had a few key injuries that contributed to our lack of success," senior Andrew Braun said. Injuries to several key players during the season struck a blow to the team not only in the physical sense but in their morale as well. Perhaps the biggest injury to strike the team was T.D. Taylor's broken arm.

The break forced Taylor, an all-state probability, to miss the next few games. Upon Taylor's return during the district play, he promptly re-broke the arm, ending his season, creating problems for the team as a whole. The remainder of the season was spent searching for a suitable replacement for the talented free-safety.

The Eagles suffered through other nagging injuries as well, which detracted from practice time and degraded the quality of play.

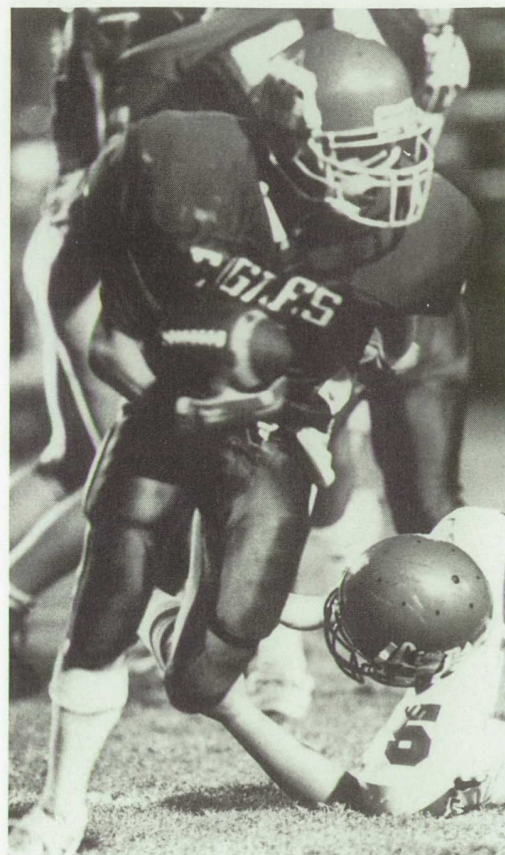

Despite the injuries, the Eagles played their last few district games with a tenacity not seen through much of the season.

"I feel that we should have finished second (in district) because we should have won those last few games," Braun said. "We only lost by a combined total of five points in those games."

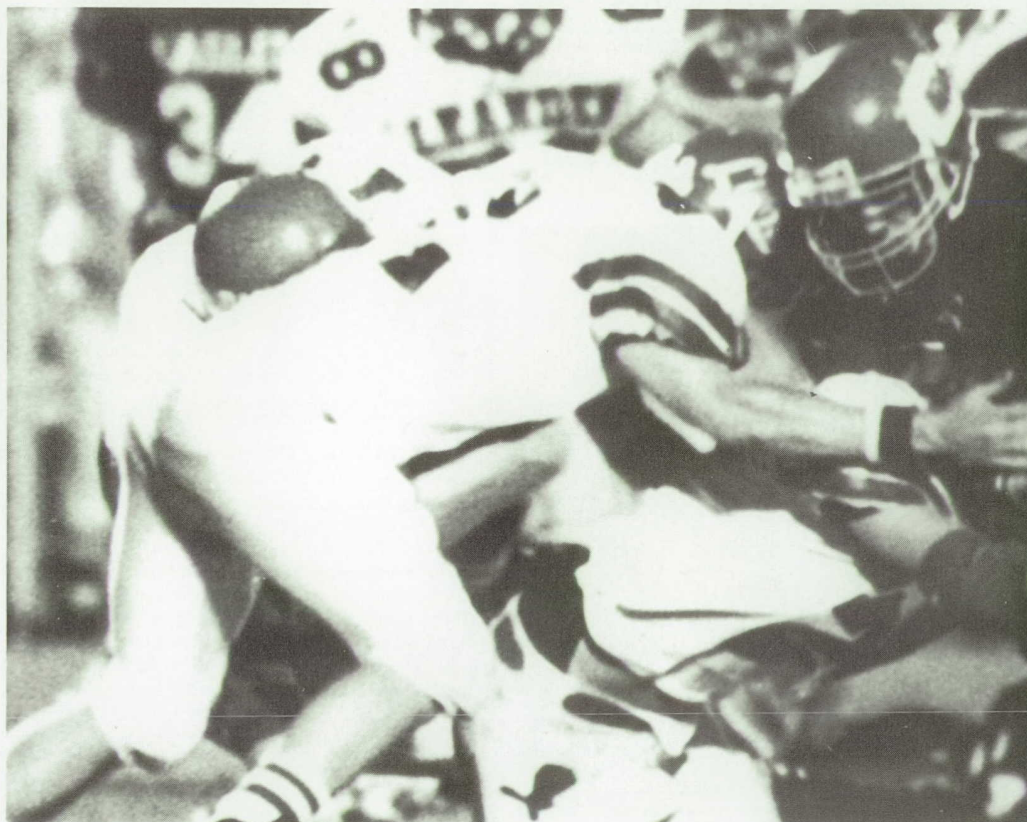

Other than the injury problems that plagued the Eagles, they lacked other necessary qualities, namely size and consistency. The largest defensive starter weighed only 200 pounds, while lining up against players that weighed up to 280 pounds.

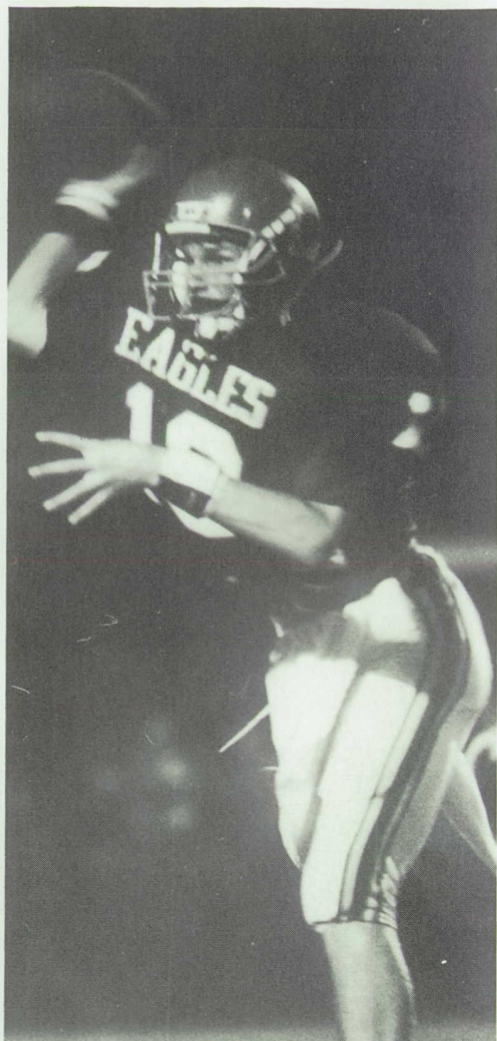

"I felt there was talent, but we lacked a consistent offense and size on the defense," Taylor said. by Kris Bushover

More Than a Game

JV and freshmen players learn life lesson

As the junior varsity and freshman football players ran onto the field, thoughts of glory ran through their heads. While the coaches dreamed of a victory, the game started. Fans screaming and parents cheering urged the players to do their best.

Gruelling practice after practice helped players realize how much work really went into the game.

"We work so hard all year, that come game time, we are ready to play hard 'Eagle Football' and win," junior Fernando Garcia said.

Being an athlete not only taught the game to the players, but it also taught them other things such as keeping up with grades for eligibility and the value of being courteous.

"I learned a lot of other things because of football," junior D.J. Vandermark said. "It helped me a lot."

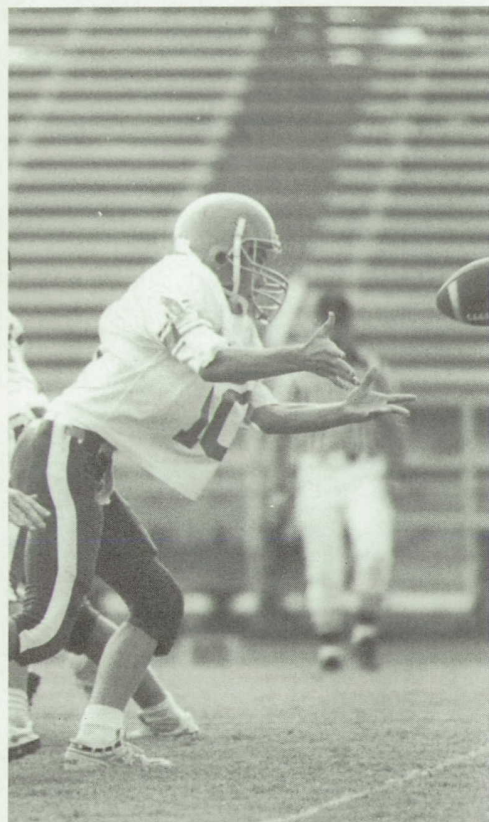

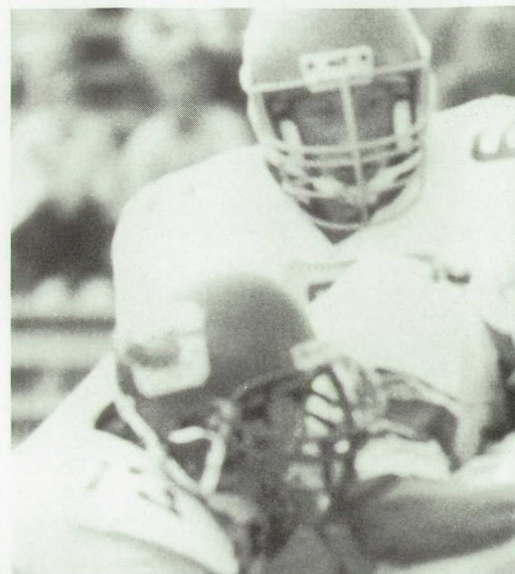

All of the different skills learned paid off, both on and off the field.

"Playing football helps me with the problems life deals," said junior Kevin Svetlik.

The freshmen "A" team finished the season 9-1 with a second in district ranking, while the freshmen "B" team finished 4-5-1 in district.

The district champion, junior varsity, gathered a 7-1-1 record.

The Tradition Continues...

Basketball battles to playoffs

At the beginning of the season, many sports experts and others picked the boys varsity basketball to finish anywhere from last to third place in district 25-4A. However, the experts did not take into account the rich tradition of the Eagle basketball program and their will to succeed.

With only one starter back from last year's State Runner-up team, senior Jason Jones, Coach Maurice Varnell had quite a job to mold ten team members with little or no varsity experience into a playoff caliber team.

The boys' varsity team responded to the challenge with a record of 19-14 and a district record of 7-3.

The Eagles placed two members on the all-district first team, senior Reid Vaughn and Jones, and placed several members on the all-district honorable mention team, senior Brian Brotzman and senior Darren Almazon.

"We would have liked to go a lot further in the playoffs, but they (Anderson) were a tough team," Jones said.

The junior varsity continued the tradition of excellence with a 22-11 record and a perfect 10-0 district record, which continued the string of 30 straight district games without a loss.

"We wanted to have a 20 plus win season, become district champs and have fun," Coach Joel Salyer said.

The freshman team had a 22-14 record with a 7-3 district record and was coached by Mark Townsend.

"The Georgetown program is a tradition rich one," Varnell said.

A Roller Coaster Ride

Injuries plague Eagles in their nest

A very young and inexperienced Lady Eagle basketball team fought the odds throughout a season of unexpected twists.

Led by sophomore returning letterman Suzanne Koy, the starting line-up of freshmen Kim Howard and Whitney Reiersen, and seniors Kerri Edgar and Kelly Johnson had a roller coaster ride in the pre-season.

Strong tournament performances at San Antonio Northside and the Fort Worth Classic showed the Lady Eagle's skill and determination, but they were soon plagued by injuries.

Senior wing Nicole Coronado and freshman Krista Watson went down with knee injuries that kept them out all season. Koy only returned to full speed in late December after a hamstring injury.

"We came along and became a good team especially considering none of us had played together before," Koy said. "We surprised a lot of people."

Once in district play, strong Midway and Belton teams posed a threat to the Lady Eagle's playoff hopes. But when put in must-win situations, the young Lady Eagles came through with tenacious defense and big scores.

As leading three-point scorer, Howard made a big adjustment from junior high to high school competition, often to the loud cheers of the fans, as she sunk numerous three-pointers throughout the season.

"Varsity ball is different from junior high, but it helped that I wasn't the only freshman," Howard said.

After many long hours of practice after school and on weekends, the team clenched the runner up position in District 25-AAAA after a tie-breaker blowout to Belton, 38-19, and earned playoff berth against Austin LBJ. The Lady Eagles lost a heart-breaker game to the Lady Jaguars, 41-56 at Burger Center.

"We had a good season, especially for being a young team," sophomore Erin Elsasser said. "We did have our moments."

The Varsity could depend on help from the junior varsity and freshman squads who laced up their shoes to step up and help out. The freshman ended district play 7-3 and tied for second, and the JV went 5-3, which earned the squad a second place tie as well. by Layne Wilson

Tennis wins big

After all the practices and all the matches, the effort put out by the freshman, junior varsity and varsity tennis teams received more than just a pat on the back. The teams captured numerous trophies throughout the year.

"My team had a very good year," Coach Kerry Minzameyer said. "Everyone played as well as they possible could have."

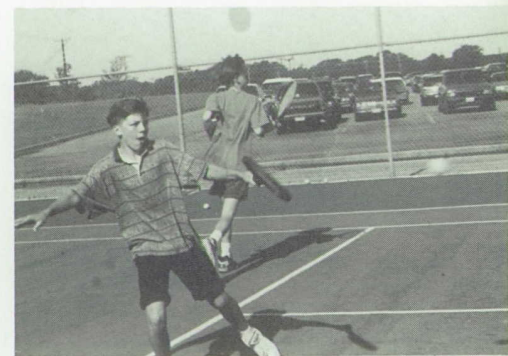

In the district meet, the varsity girls placed third and the boys fourth. Seniors Betsy Carmichael and Penny Grimm took third and juniors John Peter and Larry Brumfield came in fourth.

Both JV teams, girls and boys, captured second place in district with freshman Scott Doerfler becoming the district champ in singles and freshmen Amber Peters and Ann Michelle Pfluger taking the title in doubles. The freshman girls team finished first and the boys second in district.

"It was easy because we were freshmen," freshman Anna Robinson said.

One of the varsity's top players, who contributed to the trophy gathering, came from Germany as an exchange student. Junior Imke Ehlers played doubles with Liz Bennett.

"I like tennis over here, but it is not the same and way too hot," Ehlers said.

The Eleven from Heaven

Boys soccer continues winning ways

Soccer kicked off with a great start. The varsity team took the lead in the second half against Westlake, came back to win the game by one point with a score of 5 to 6 and won the next two games.

Teams could not be this successful without talent. The team, lead by all-state mid-fielder James Gonzales, who scored 22 goals, finished first in district.

To accomplished this, the players believed that they were blessed with a great coach who really cared about his team, personally, and as a whole.

"A team like ours, that works together like we do, doesn't just come about without a coach that is devoted to each and every person on the team," senior Robbie Bacchus said.

The season ended with a record of 15-7-1. After advancing to regionals, the team lost to Killeen Ellison 2-1.

"I think we've had a darn good season and an awesome team this year," senior Sal Torres said.

When the soccer season came to a close many were glad for a rest.

"The season was fun, but I'm glad for a break," senior Chris Ellington said.

Overachievers

Lady Eagles soccer strive for recognition

Considering the eight returning letterman, the Lady Eagle soccer players were expected to have a good season. However, they were never expected to go where no other Lady Eagle soccer team had gone before: to the regional semi-finals.

"We are really excited because we are the first Lady Eagle soccer team to make the playoffs," varsity player Kate Wade said.

Varsity capped off the season with a 12-6 record by blowing out such teams as Belton, by as much as 12 points.

Part of the teams success came from their friendships. Even the three Neary sisters: Maura, Marion, Jennifer got along most of the time.

"We work good together, but sometimes we fight on the field," senior Maura Neary said, "It's definitely a unique experience."

The JV Lady Eagles finished first in district, and closed out the season with a 10-2 record, 6-0 in district.

To many Varsity players, this first-ever playoff berth was the start of a new tradition. The Lady Eagles will be returning many of their players to aid them in their quest for the state finals.

Early Rise, Early Swim

Team strokes through waves

A young team, composed of one senior, four sophomores, and five freshman, battled some of the state's strongest swim teams. To compete at this level, the team hit the pool every morning from 7:15 to 9:15.

"It takes a lot of dedication and determination to sacrifice the time to do well in this sport," sophomore Brian Russel, holder of the school 100 meter butterfly record, said.

Getting up early had both advantages and disadvantages for students. They got their exercising done early, but had to face afternoon classes with sleepy eyes.

"Well, you're awake during the day but you're worn out in the evening," senior Nikki Harris said.

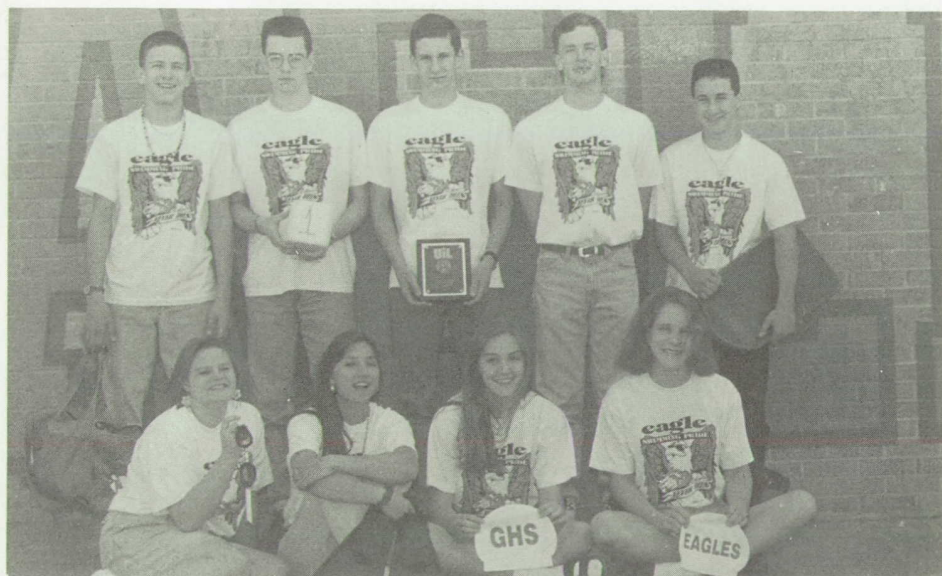

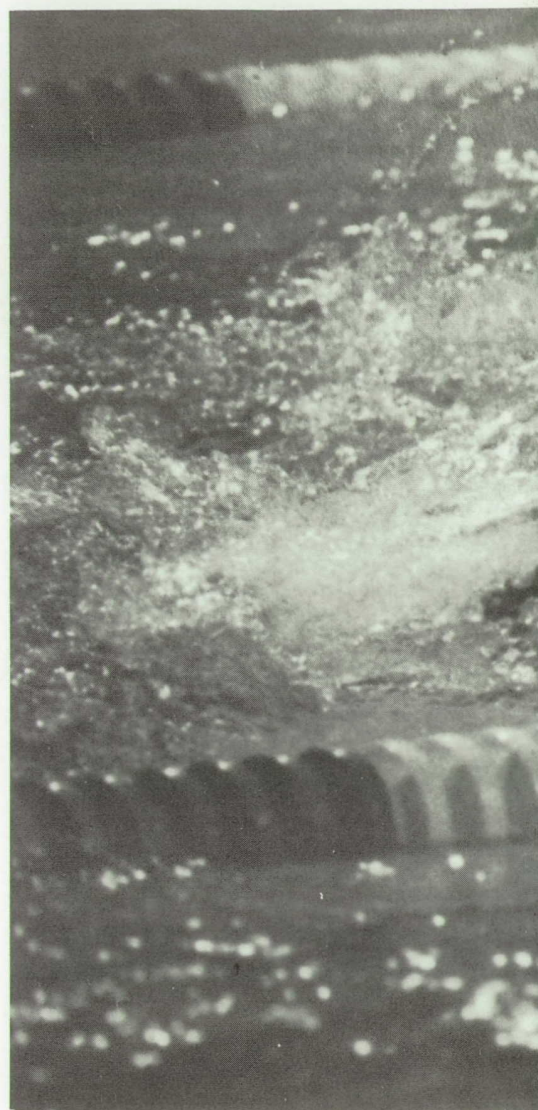

From defeat to breaking records to just finishing, swimming gave students moments to remember.

"When I looked at the clock after my 100 butterfly at state, I realized that I had won constellation finals," freshman Nisse Perkins said.

Doing so well in high school, some students wished to pursue swimming in the future, especially if their chosen college would give them the opportunity.

"Because it promotes good health, and if offered the chance in college to swim, then I will," freshman John Janak said.

Golf teams swing into season

During the seventh period of the day Coach Diane Davis and Coach Paul Parsons taught the girls' golf. The girls' and the boys' golf also practiced a few times a week after school at Berry Creek, the Ramada Driving Range, and the Georgetown Country Club.

"Golf is a lot of fun," sophomore Melissa Marshall said. "We get to get out of seventh period, and I've gotten a chance to meet a lot of really great people."

Freshman Ryan Tull played a big part in boys' golf team. He won second place in the Marion Dameron Invitational in Waco and first place in the Leander Invitational. The boys' golf team placed overall second in the Leander Invitational Tournament and placed third in the Canyon Invitational at New Braunfels.

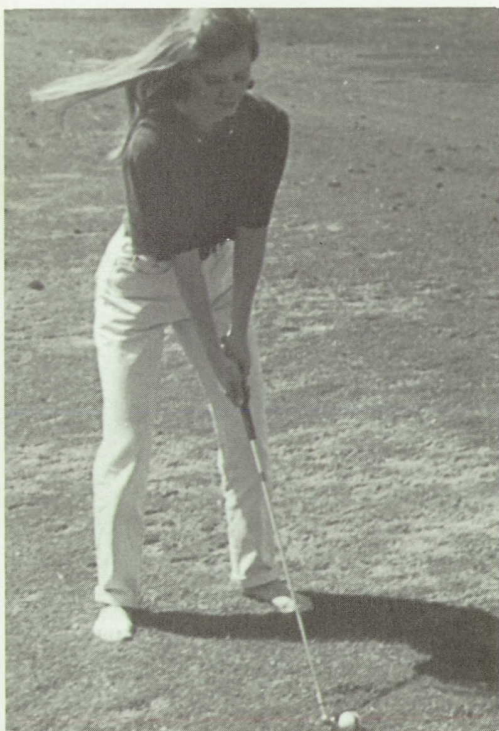

The Lady Eagle's golf competed in the Leander High Invitational at Crystal Falls Golf course in Leander. They also competed at the Pfeifer Oldfield Classic at the Lost Pine course in Bastrop.

Most golf players spent numerous hours of spare time practicing, trying to make themselves better players.

"Golf is actually a difficult sport," junior Felicity Sagan said. "It takes a lot of time and practice."

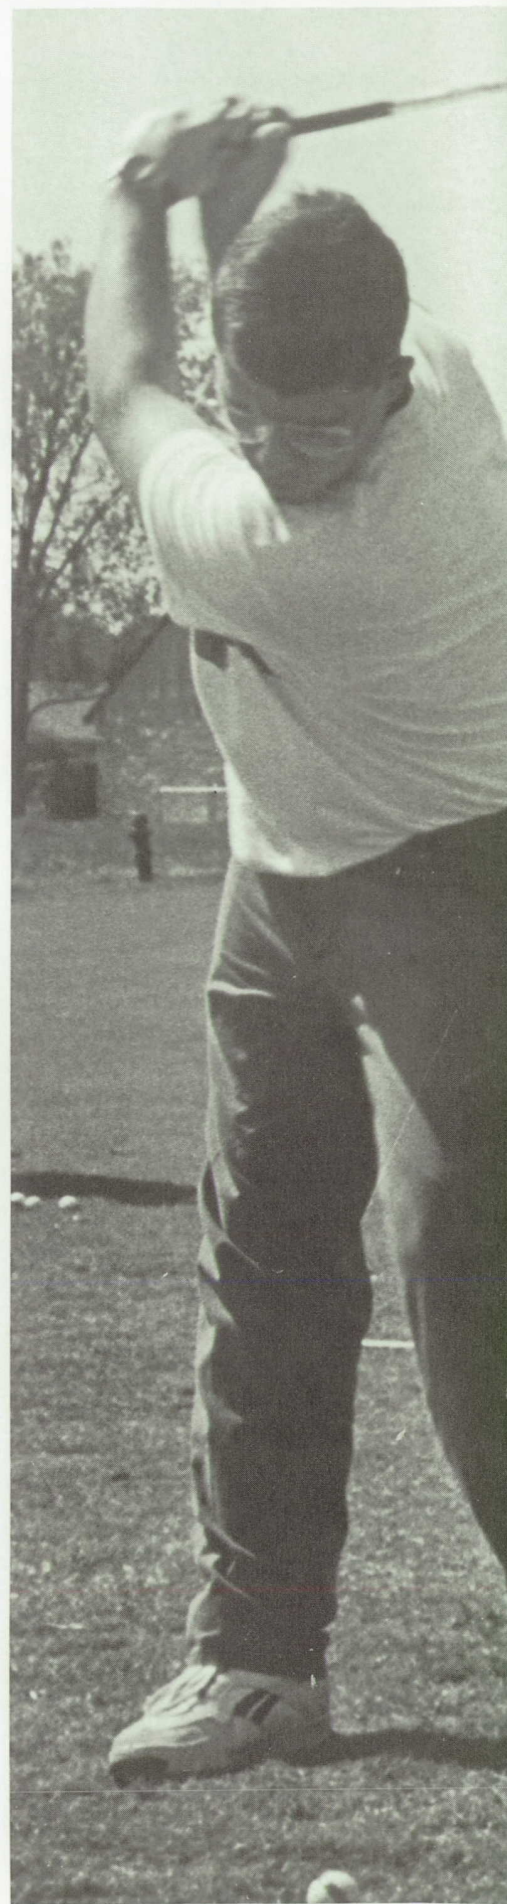

Both the girls' and boys' golf teams placed fourth in their respective district tournaments at the Georgetown Country Club.

Track Is Back

Spring brings return of track season

It's a hot spring day, about 85 degrees, and the sun is directly over head. Who would want to spend their free time on a hot rubber track? The members of the boys track team!

Headed by Coach John Baskin and assistant Coach Mark Townsend, the boys track team consisted of about 60 people. Of those, about 20 were on the Freshman team, 25 on the Junior Varsity, and 15 on the Varsity team.

Track practices were held during seventh period for those in the seventh period track class, and after school for those who were not in that class. The long distance runners, coached by Townsend, ran in the morning.

Athletes who competed in field events, hurdles, and relay teams also practiced after school regardless of whether or not they took the seventh period class.

The after school practices were usually held from the time school got out to about 5 p.m. The after school practice also gave the assistant coaches who could not be at the seventh period practice a chance to help runners in different areas.

Track meets most often took place on weekends, so students seldom missed school. Some of the meets, however, were during school hours.

"I get behind on homework and stuff, but it's nice to get out of school for track meets," freshman Jay Stepenson said.

Although missing school for a meet counted as an excused absence, students were still required to make up any assignments that they missed while away.

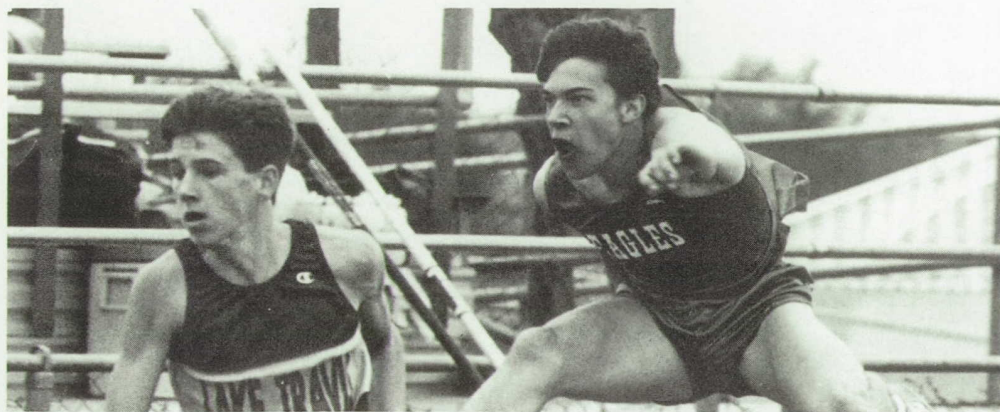

Some of the events included the 100 meter dash, the 1600 meter relay, the 3200 run (two miles), high jump, long jump, pole vault, and shot put. A student participating in a wide range of events might have gone from the 100 to the long jump to the 110 hurdles to the high jump.

"Sometimes I'll go from the 200 (meter) to the 800 (meter) with only about five or less minutes rest in between," freshman Blake Hall said. "It's a lot harder when you haven't even caught your breath from a different one."

Conditioning was one of the main contributing factors when athletes quickly moved from race to race. During seventh period and after-school practices, work on conditioning took on almost as much importance as working on skill and technique. Long distances and strides (running the length of the football field, walking back, and doing it again at a full sprint) were the main tools used in conditioning. Most of the members of the seventh period track class looked forward to days when they got to do strides.

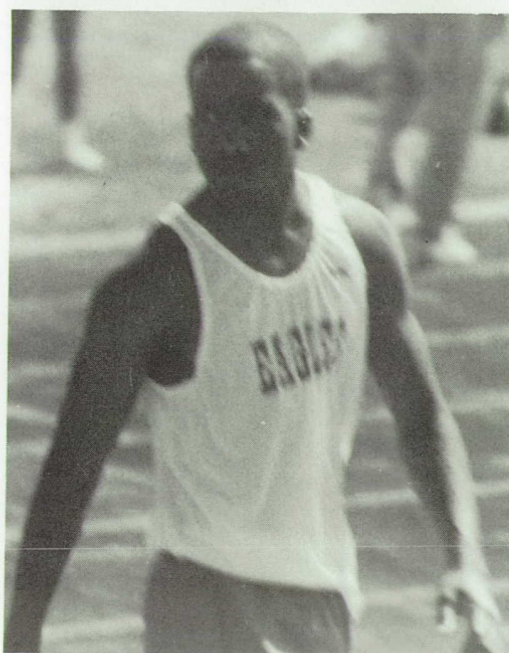

"Strides aren't bad at all," sophomore Nathan Huba said. "It's a lot better than doing sprints or something else."

Go Girls!

Varsity captures district championship

For the first time in eight years, girls varsity tracksters became district champs April 14 and 15 in Leander.

"It was the most awesome feeling watching the mile relay team finish first and win the title District Champs by 1/2 a point," senior Teri Draeger said. "What a way to leave your senior year!"

District was an overall victory for both the girls and the school.

Much preparation by the coaches and intense training and rules for the girls finally paid off. The leadership from only two seniors kept the girls going and made sure they stretched properly to warm up their muscles.

Patty Lindsey, one of the seniors on the team for four years, headed the girls everyday in stretching. The other senior,

Teri Draeger, kept everyone laughing and having a great time.

The workout for the girls varied day to day from Monday - long distance; to Tuesday - weights or run 400's; to Wednesday - long distance; to Thursday - weights; to Friday - sprints in the grass.

"The workouts were hard, but at the end it all payed off," sophomore Megan McNerny said.

For the overall success of the team, the freshmen took third at district, JV received second and the ten runners: Charlotte Graham, Cate Locke, Cara Broadaway, Kim Schminz, Patty Lindsey, Kristie Killen, Amber Pearce, Joni Lindsey, Kelly Anderson, and Skye Hecktroth, qualified in regionals.

The Bomb Squad

Varsity baseball blows away competition

At the beginning of the season, varsity baseball started out strong, beating tough competitors in pre-district play. The team rolled right on through district to finish tied for first place with Belton with a record of 7-3. Junior varsity broke even in district.

"We have a great flow of talent, but we aren't playing as a team," sophomore Royce Hamilton said. "If we played as a team, we should be able to become the best in JV baseball."

The varsity boys went first to Leander to decide whether the Eagles or Belton would take the first place title. The Eagles came out short with a loss of 1-6. Although spirits sagged, the team unity rose.

"The combo of great pitching, hitting, and defense lead us into the playoffs," senior Steven Zieschang said.

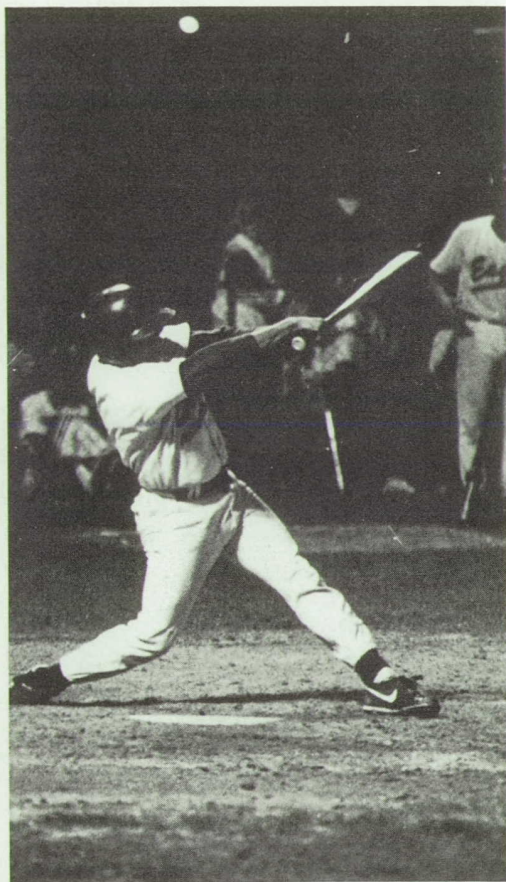

The team traveled to Round Rock to face Austin's Anderson High School. After solid play throughout the first couple of innings, the team started trailing and lost the game 6-13. (Anderson kept winning and winning, all the way to State.)

"This year was great!" senior Cory Hall said. "We had a really close team, and I think that helped us to the playoffs."

Although they ended up on a sour note, the boys still held their heads high with pride.

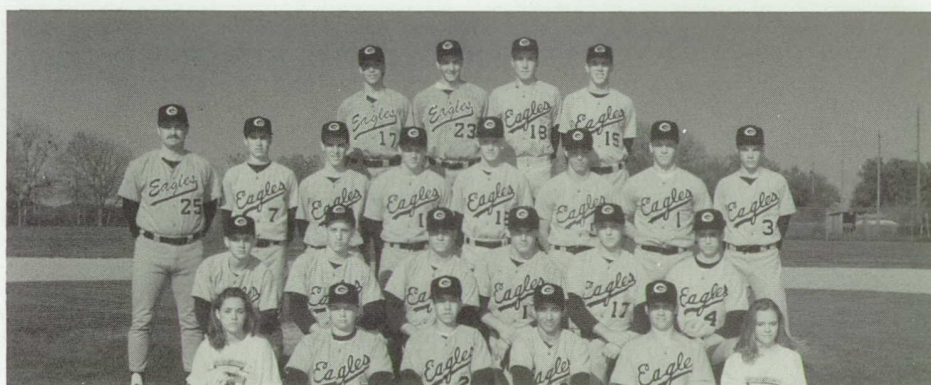

"We had a good season!" senior Cliff Jaeger said. "Even though we didn't go as far as we wanted."

A League of Their Own

Softball finally gets recognition

"Batter up!" yelled the umpire as the Lady Eagles took charge on the field for their first softball game of the season. Except this season was different. After many trips to the school board and support from team parents and students, girls softball team finally had its hard work pay off. It became a Universal Inter-scholastic League sport.

The new movement made some big changes. The harder practices and seriousness took some of the girls by surprise.

"The practices are harder, and there's a lot more seriousness on the field, but I guess in the long run it'll all pay off," sophomore Joslyn McWhorter said.

The new UIL rules allowed the team to go as far as the state playoffs. Another addition to the program was a junior varsity team. This gave the beginners some playing action.

All in all the girls and parents were very pleased with the new act.

"I think softball becoming a UIL sport brings a lot more opportunities for girls such as scholarships, and also I feel that we'll get more support," senior Tina Karnstadt said.

The girls were now also allowed to play at the Georgetown softball fields. This was a big break compared to the years before. In the past the team had to travel to Austin for every game. The recognition was becoming greater. The sport was quickly becoming well known.

"I think it'll become a nation wide sporting event again, and possibly will become more popular in the Olympics," junior Kelly Wells said.

Some people seemed to disagree.

"I really don't think softball gets enough attention as it should," sophomore Brittany Powers said. "It seems like people think it's a sissy sport, but it's getting better." by Joslyn McWhorter and Sara Mersiovsky.

Alternate Teams

Students inspired outside of school

Tumbling, lassos, cart-wheels, spurs and latigos may not have been usual for high school teams, but for a handful of students these items were necessary for their extra curricular teams.

Junior Lauren Boswell and sophomore Jenny Davis participated on gymnastics team at Athletic Systems Incorporated (ASI). They practiced with their younger teammates Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays from 3:30 to 7:30 pm.

"It takes up a lot of time," Boswell said.

Students who took gymnastics were granted PE credit. Also, since the team traveled to go on meets, their time off from school counted as a school function.

The team advanced from District to South State to State. Members competed at level eight optional, meaning the coach made up the team's routines.

The two local teammates placed well at meets. Boswell received first at Colorado and sixth at South State. Davis received third in Colorado and eighth at South State.

Gymnastics had not yet been introduced as a high school team. Advertisement for it had not been wide spread to make a competitive team.

"It (gymnastics) could get more (attention)," Boswell said. "It would be nice if there was a school program for it."

Another team not known to many rides horses and ropes steers. Three seniors and two juniors participated in the Texas High School Rodeo Association, region 10. Seniors Brant Jones, Jason Haecker, Shannon Cassidy, juniors Matt Wilkie, and Mike Sobey are the five gents who risked their lives to ride in the rodeo.

Participating on this team did not give high school credit, but it did add to the adventure of extra curricular activities.

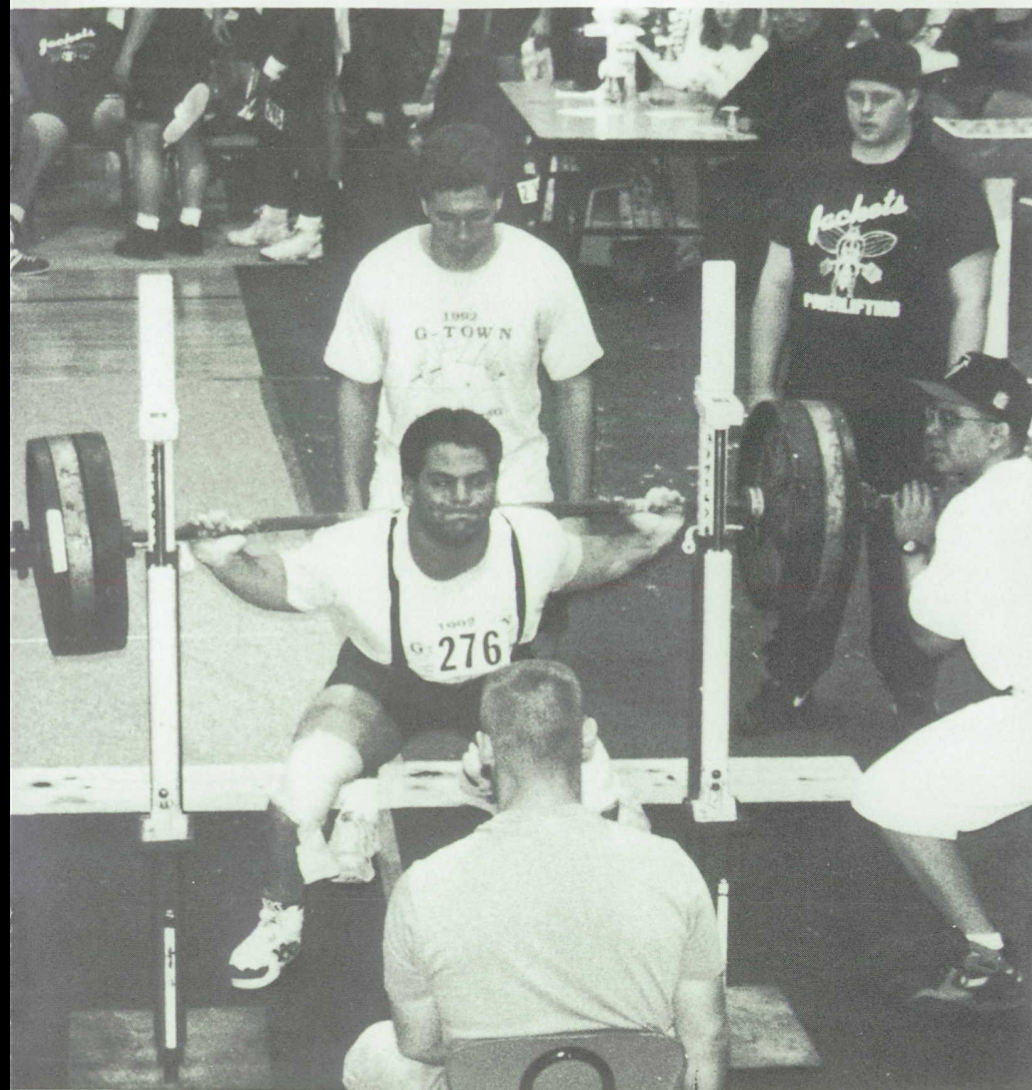

These activities are slowly growing. To become a member of these teams, contact any of the present participants.

Street Sports

Hockey sticks, skateboards skim surface

One of the newest crazes among high school students was street hockey. In states such as California, Minnesota and Florida, leagues popped up everywhere. Locally a few players got together and formed pick-up games.

"Street hockey gives me a chance to escape all the pressures of school," junior Todd Snead said.

Most did not think about school when playing and more people continued to show up. All anyone needed to play were a pair of skates and a stick.

"It's fast paced, a challenge and a fun thing," sophomore Brian Russell said. In fact some skaters can exceed speeds of 20 m.p.h. by Andy Armstrong

Skateboarding, not considered a sport by the vast majority, nevertheless attracted a loyal following who believed it to be just another sport.

"It's just like any other teenage pastime," junior James Janning said. "It eases the monotony of everyday living."

Local skaters said they would like to have skateboarding accepted as a sport. They believed that skateboarding took skill and required practice to manipulate the boards. They also encouraged others to try.

"I wish more people would try it. It's not so hard," freshman Mike Hill said. "People just need to give it a chance."

Student Council backbone of school

As the backbone of student activity, Student Council's responsibilities varied. Everything from dances to elections involved planning and dedication from council members.

"There are usually multiple events going on so it is hard to be there to back up the students all the time," teacher Judy Millegan said.

Student Council sponsored all of the major school events including Homecoming and Coronation. History and psychology teacher Judy Millegan guided the council.

"As a sponsor, it is very hard to stay on top of things all the time," Millegan said.

A few projects consisted of dances after football games, Save-A-Sweetheart pledges, and concession stands at football and basketball games.

"I was in charge of dances and concession stands and it took a lot of hard work," sophomore Annie Kersch said.

Along with its usual projects, Student Council helped sponsor a mock election for President of the United States and organized an insentive program.

Student Council members also encouraged students to help those in need. They sponsored a school supplies drive after Hurricane Andrew hit the Lousianna coast, and at Christmas time, the council set up a can food drive and a giving tree.

"We also do some community service projects and participate in workshops sponsored by The Texas Association of Student Councils," Millegan said.

Student Council also organized Student Government elections. Each class held an assembly and then students voted during their lunch hour.

"We're really trying to encourage people to vote and get involved," junior Carolyn Parnell said.

Marching-N-Music

Band takes break from State

Starting in early August, the band prepared for another year of marching at football games and competitions.

Marching in band took serious concentration with learning new sets and forms almost every day. It included hard work for many band students, especially freshmen.

"Marching as a freshman wasn't really all that hard, but I had to concentrate and not goof off!" freshman Jeffrey Meyers said. "The upperclassmen teaching me what to do in the stands and on the field made it easier, and a lot more fun!"

By mid-football season, the band and Georgettes had learned the complete show which contained music from the movies: Oklahoma Crude, Wayne's World, and Robin Hood.

The band marched at every home football game and followed the football team to every out of town game.

"The out of town games were the best, because we always had so much fun dancing and goofing around on the bus!" junior Michelle Hancock said. "Especially the Brownwood trip, because the whole caravan of busses had to pull over so Kelley Schirmer and I could use the restroom!"

The band, an important part of the games, helped the crowd get enthusiastic whenever a game got dull.

This year because of a new rule, 1, 2, and 4A bands could only go as far as district, and could only compete for State every other year, so the band did not get a chance at State.

"I don't like the new rule where 1, 2, and 4A bands march one year, and then 3 and 5A the next," sophomore Wesley King said. "It's kind of cool that we get a year to rest from all the pressure, but then we only get two chances at State instead of four!"

The band did compete at two marching competitions though, the first being at the Westlake Marching Festival. The band took second place to Leander's first.

"Last year we had first, and Leander had second. This year, Leander first and us second," sophomore Audrey Richter said with a smile. "They can have the spotlight this year, but wait until next year!"

The second competition was UIL, where the band added another win to the 25 year sweepstakes running streak.

After working very hard on the show, band members hated to see the marching season end.

"I'm going to miss band a lot," senior Victor Garcia said after the last football game. "I have a lot of friends in band, and I'm going to miss them all, mostly the trumpet section and Mr. Klett!" by Kelley Schirmer and Melissa Mezger

The Band behind the Band

One word says it all: Guard!

From the back sidelines of the football field, members of the flag corps added color to the half-time show.

Bigger than ever before, the 22 member team faced numerous challenges adjusting to new sponsors and directors.

"This year, being my first year in guard, I didn't know what was expected of me," junior Tana Helson said. "It took a lot of time and hard work, but when we took second at Westlake, I knew it was all worth it."

In addition to morning and afternoon rehearsals, guard members also sacrificed many weekends, striving for perfection.

"People don't realize just how difficult guard is," junior Ashley Crumpton said. "When you're standing on the field, waving a five foot pole in the air, there's no such thing as a small mistake."

Through hours of dedication, members eliminated mistakes in time for participation in the District Marching Contest. Scoring a one, members went home with a feeling of pride and hope for next year.

"Color Guard was pretty good this year," sophomore Jill Dillon said, "but I was disappointed that we didn't live up to personal expectations established from last year's performances."

The team missed the Best Auxillary award, only by a small margin.

"Through it all, the guard marched an impressive show, and closed the season with memories, new friendships, and the spirit of competition that will stay with them always," director Pat Grimmer said.

Late nights, long bus rides, and sleepy Saturday mornings composed this marching season.

"The ups and downs of new directors was frustrating," freshman Summer Barber said. "But next year we'll take State." by Tess Milford and Lori Yamka

Merry Melodies

Choir, more than singing

Choir, not just singing anymore, took extra hours outside of school for practice and rehearsals. Jazz-n-Pizazz practiced sometimes in the morning before school, during class and two hours every Monday night.

"The practices are okay, but there is a lot of goofing off that goes on," freshman Jessica Hobratch said. "But overall, we get a lot done."

The choir worked not only on their singing, but also on their dancing. Intricate dance steps added in with the music gave their performances a little more pizzazz.

Bruce Johnson, the director of the choirs, supported every member and pushed them to the best of their ability.

"Mr. 'J' gave me a lot of support and helped me out a lot during the year," sophomore Sandy Smith said.

The choirs participated at UIL solo and ensemble, where the girls choir recieved a two, and the show choir recieved a one.

Girls choir and show choir held many fundraisers throughout the year to earn money. They held carwashes, newspaper drives, concession stands, the school store, and they held a spaghetti dinner concert. All of the money earned went towards their trip at the end of the year.

Girls choir went to Sandy Lake in Dallas, while the show choir went to Nashville. Both choirs received excellent or superior ratings.

All in all throughout the year, the show choir, and girls choir worked hard and together like a team.

Jumping to It

Cheerleaders inspire victories

When the school year ended, the work for the upcoming year had just begun for cheerleaders. They sold ads, painted signs, attended camps, and learned new cheers.

"It's hard work and frustrating sometimes but in the end all the hard work really pays off," sophomore Sara Kohutek said.

When the summer ended, the work did not. Cheerleaders worked hard to make the pep rallies and games more exciting and enjoyable.

"I love the friendship that forms between the squad. We are all very close," junior Lindsey Coulter said. "Being on varsity this year has been the best."

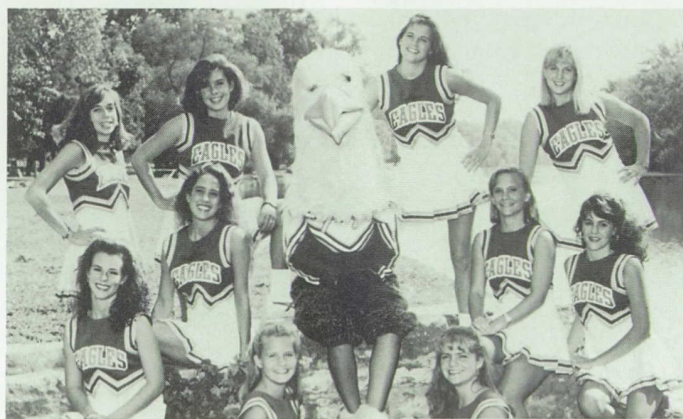

Several cheerleaders talked about the fun they had and the many different experiences they will never forget.

"Cheerleading is definitely an experience. The friends we've made will remain with us all our life," senior Sarah Ortiz said. "I'm just thankful I've had the opportunity to become a part of such a great organization."

Cheerleaders played a major roll in school life. They brought the spirit of the school to the games.

"The whole year was a blast and it all started with camp and becoming better friends with each other and the other squads," freshman Kristie Killen said.

Dancin' up a Storm

Georgettes capture high ranking at contest

At 6:00 a.m. every week-day morning 24 girls woke-up and slowly came together, and by 7:30 a.m. they were dancing as if they were one. The Georgette team, required to come to school two hours early every-day, practiced for football and contest seasons.

To be able to get much done in practice took much self-discipline.

"It's not only about dancing," freshman Andrea Smith said. "It's about self-confidence and discipline."

The Georgettes practiced 15 hours a week. They almost always had two hours of morning and one after school practice.

Football season required the Georgettes to attend a four day dance camp. The team learned leadership skills plus teamwork skills by helping teammates over a 20 foot wall among many other obstacles. They learned four halftime performance dances and two pep rally dances.

The team attended all of the pep rallies and performed at two of them.

"It was great!" freshman Kelly Jensen said. "I loved being in the spotlight and performing for the school."

Even when the team did not perform, they showed their spirit by participating in the cheers and fight song.

The Georgettes attended and performed at every football game. Not only did they perform their dances, they also performed with the band during their show.

"I loved dancing for the crowd and meeting the other drill teams," freshman Amy Benold said.

After football season the team had a short break and started contest season. Preparing for contest season meant extra hours of practice and perfecting three dances, a pom, novelty, and a prop routine. In order for practices to be worthwhile, team members had to practice, practice, practice.

"In order to be a Georgette, everyone had to be devoted and give their absolute always," sophomore Heather Murdock said.

The Georgettes went to two major contests. The first one was the San Antonio Spurs competition in January. The team performed the novelty "Hot, Hot, Hot," and received a superior rating. Both of the duets also got division ones while Sadia Ahmed received second overall in solos. Later the team attended a Spurs' game.

During Spring Break the Georgettes attended their second competition at Disney World in Orlando, Florida. They performed their three contest routines and received all division ones. The three small ensembles also received division ones and senior Sadia Ahmed made it to finals with her solo performance.

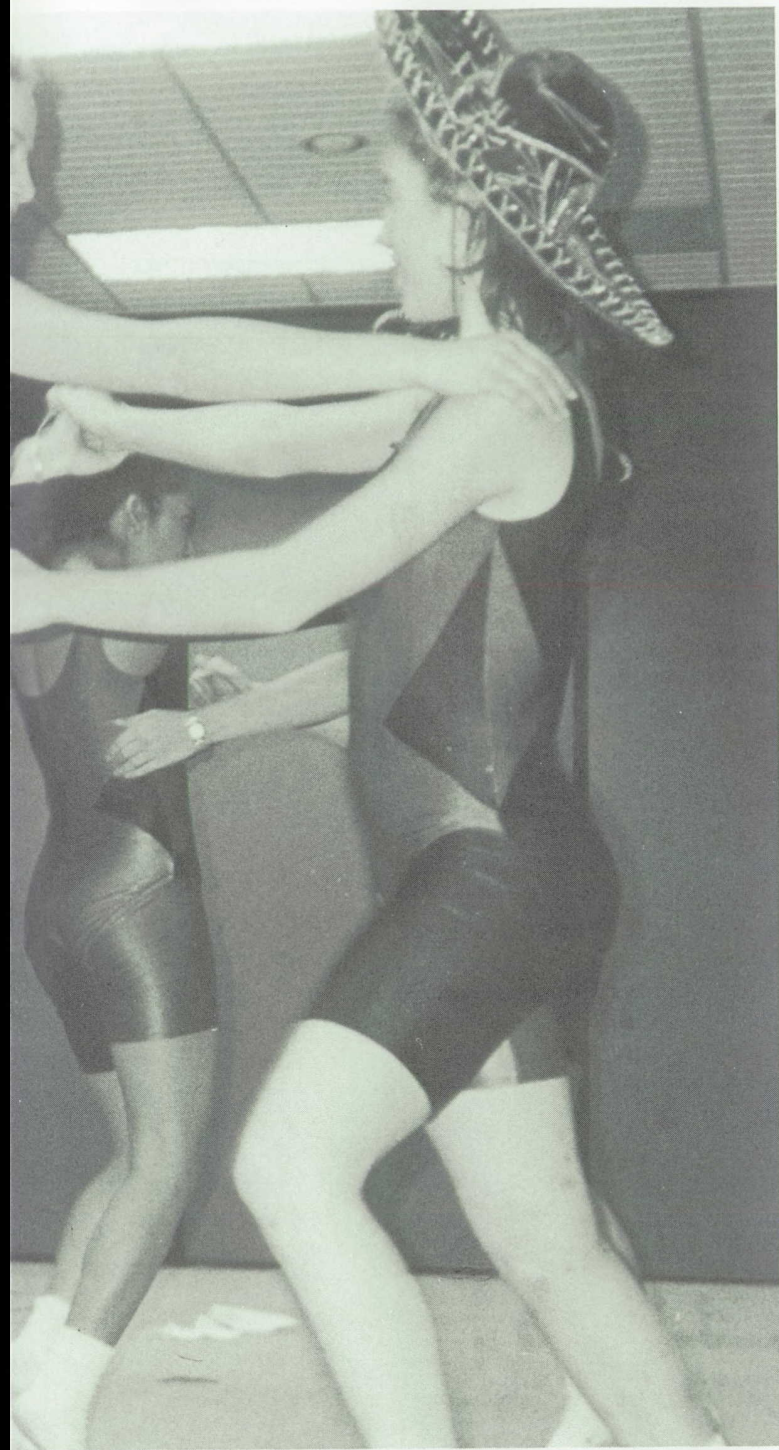

"It felt great, when we got a division one," freshman Ashli Hurlbut said.

While at the Magic Kingdom the girls also got to see the sights. The team visited all the parks and had a wide variety of things to do.

Over the year they grew closer as a team and friends and always depended on each other through hardships and laughter in the best situations. The team members soon learned after making the team it was not only about dancing but also about friendships.

"Everybody's always there ready to listen when you have got a problem," freshman Lisa Bracamontez said. "We're all one big family---sisters." by Melissa Mezger and Denise West

Strictly Foreign

Clubs offer culture, scholarship

Foreign language clubs gave students an opportunity to strengthen their language skills, learn about specific cultures, and meet new people.

From German to Latin to Spanish to French, students joined foreign language clubs.

The clubs not only provided practice of a language, but allowed students a chance to relax with friends.

Clubs also sponsored fundraisers to pay for trips and give scholarships to graduating students.

Fundraisers ranged from penny drives to raffle drawings. Each club came up with its own original ideas.

The Spanish club held its annual Miss Año Nuevo pageant and raised money for scholarships.

"Miss Año Nuevo was packed, and we really made some money," junior Hollie Carlson said.

Latin club stayed with tradition and sold Candy Grams at Christmas time.

"With the money we earned we gave out two $100 scholarships this year, one to a boy and one to a girl," junior Lindsey Coulter said.

German club students sponsored a penny drive to raise money. Members raised money to finance a student exchange program during spring break.

"Everyone is looking forward to spring break because the German students will be arriving," junior Shelly Schooley said.

In hopes of traveling to Quebec, French club members sold raffle tickets to a dinner for two at Chez Nous Restaurant. For Valentine's day the members made tissue paper flowers and sold cookies.

"The Quebec trip was cancelled, but we used the money we raised for scholarships," Polasek said.

Altogether, students simply enjoyed having fun with other classmates and their teachers.

Express Yourself!

Speech & Drama say it with feeling

Before school, after school, and even on weekends, speech and drama members never rested.

Long hours of rehearsal prepared them for competitions and brought club members closer together.

"I like it because of the comfortableness of the club and also being with friends," junior Suzi Kiser said.

Tina McKay, speech teacher and club sponsor, took club members to competitions in San Antonio and San Marcus.

Along with competitions, the speech club participated in fund raisers, banquets, and readings in places such as local elementary schools.

"Mrs. McKay is real young, real fun, and a great teacher," junior Tana Helson said.

Described by others as "a grown-up kid," and "just one of the girls, she could easily be mistaken as a student."

Nicknamed "Cap'n" by her club members, drama teacher Carla Hooker has a special relationship with her students as well.

"She understands us, I think we should celebrate Mrs. Hooker day!" sophomore Aaron Hart said.

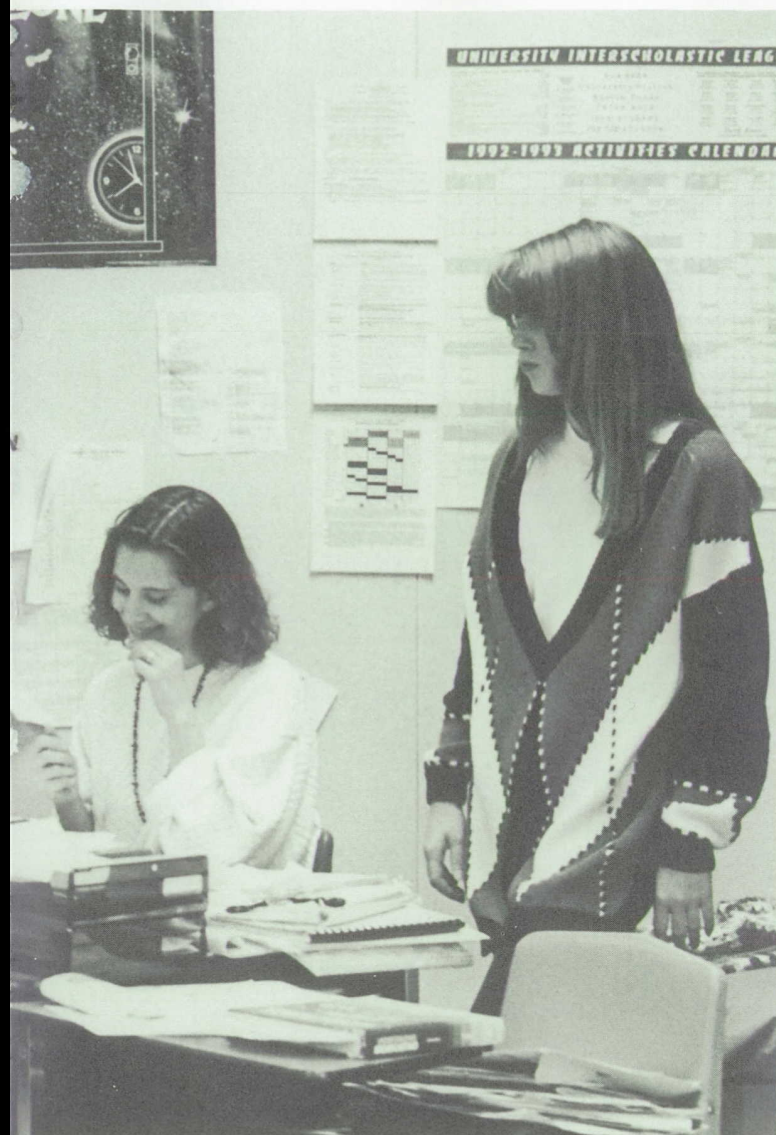

Drama club provided students with a creative outlet for energies, and allowed them to learn to work well with other students.

"These kids are the finest, most talented students I've ever worked with," Hooker said. "My biggest praise is the kids."

Speech and drama worked hard, but through it all, they always had fun.

Writing All About It

Talon & Aerie staff work year 'round

Before the students can read all about it, the publication classes have to write all about it.

"I didn't think that it would be easy," senior Amanda Stone said. "But I didn't realize it would be this hard."

A part of Aerie and the Talon, staff members spent hours before, during and after school, and even on the weekends, to perfect their own display of creativity in their publications.

"The class is good if you like to write," junior Jason Coppi said. "But if you don't, sign up for Home Ec instead."

Staff members for both publications worked year 'round, not only in the classroom, but selling ads too. The cost of the ads and the price of the publications helped to pay for the cost of producing them.

"I like the newspaper program because you can get out in the public and sell ads," senior Robbie Kemble said. "It's kind of like skipping, but legal."

Although members spent a lot of time working during the school year, they also worked during the summer to finish up the yearbook with graduation.

"I think it's really important for graduation to be a part of the book," junior Kelly Homeyer said. "It gives the graduates a chance to remember their final walks as seniors."

With all the work and extra hours, staffers still managed to have fun and build strong friendships.

"Through all of our work and time together, we really got to know each other," sophomore Kelley Schirmer said. "This will be a year I'll never forget."

Clubs educate for future

"It (BPA) taught me never to give up," senior
Tifani
Edwards

In an effort to prepare themselves for the future, students joined clubs such as TAFE, BPA, DECA, and TAME. These clubs provided students a chance to learn more about their prospective careers.

TAFE, Texas Association of Future Educators, encouraged students to investigate the field of education. It sponsored several activities, including a Christmas party at Mary Bailey Child Development center.

"I can't get over how much more they know than when I was in third grade," senior Jennifer Willrich said.

BPA, Business Professionals of America, offered students the chance to become leaders in the business world. Members, inducted during the fall, participated in the March of Dimes and hosted several guest speakers.

"It (BPA) prepares me for the business world of tomorrow," senior Sarah Ortiz said.

TAME, Texas Alliance for Minorities in Engineering, educated students about the fields of engineering. Membership, open to everyone, ranged from 50 to 80 students.

"TAME opens doors for our members," sponsor Linda Cisnaros said. "You can use it for motivation."

TAME sponsored activities such as a lock-in during April.

DECA, Distributive Education Co-op of America, helped students learn while working in local businesses. DECA, sponsored by Rosemary Falls, competed at the district, regional, and state levels.

Each club helped students to prepare for the future and to decide their occupation.

"It (BPA) taught me never to give up," senior Tifani Edwards said.

Tomorrow Today

Clubs look to future

Finding time to improve the future proved a difficult task for students. Clubs such as Science club, Junior Historians, and Health Occupations helped many students do just that.

"The most difficult thing about Science club was finding a day when everyone could come," junior Ruth Langenegger said.

Science club promoted environmental awareness by recycling paper within the school. They also raised money selling t-shirts with information about endangered species on them.

Junior Historians hoped to raise students awareness about the past. Along with their annual trip to the Renaissance Fair, Junior Historians also took a trip to San Antonio to learn about its history.

"Junior Historians is fun because you can meet interesting people and spend time with them," senior Laura Low said.

Health Occupations, which was also a class, helped students learn about the health fields. Twice a week students traveled to the hospital to work. Weekly they rotated to different areas of the hospital.

"I think that anyone interested in the health care field should take health occupations," senior Jennifer Owens said, "I love it."

Honors

Work rewarded

Hard work and determination helped many students achieve success in the classroom.

Seniors who maintained a 93 average in all classes earned the honor of becoming Rotary Scholars. These students received jackets from the local Rotarians.

Frost Citizen of the Month, also limited to seniors, honored students for their citizenship within the school and the community. Local banks and private individuals awarded a $50 savings bond to each winner.

Students could be selected to National Honor Society if they secured a 91 average, teacher recommendation and participated in extracurricular activities. by R. Langenegger

Just PALling Around

Students establish positive role models

To help the students have a more positive school experience, PALs (Peer Assistance and Leadership) aimed its program toward improving the lives of others during its sixth period class.

"It is a great program that has helped many youth and is a great asset to the community," junior Shae Posey said.

Some of the PALs' goals sought to reduce smoking, alcohol and drug abuse, and to prevent drop outs. By providing individual and group support, PALs members hoped to raise awareness and give alternatives to everyone within the Georgetown Independent School District.

"We were involved with the middle schools and junior high to do special projects on drinking, smoking, friendships, and drugs," senior Sarah Ortiz said.

PALs achieved its goals by giving presentations, which entertained as well as instructed, to the younger students on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays.

Members also made an anti-drug presentation and participated in other activities, such as tutoring, self-esteem building, decision making, and listening.

"I've been a PAL for two years and it is an important part of my life," senior Angel Nettleton said. "It's neat to know you can make a difference in someone else's life."

To qualify as a PAL member, students had to fill out applications, which were read and exclusively hand-picked by Holly Barret, the teacher and sponsor of the PALs class.

"Becoming a PAL was not easy," junior Blake Hilstrom said. "It takes a lot of hard work and determination."

After being chosen as a member, these students attended many retreats and went through a number of leadership programs on the long road to becoming better leaders, listeners, and friends.

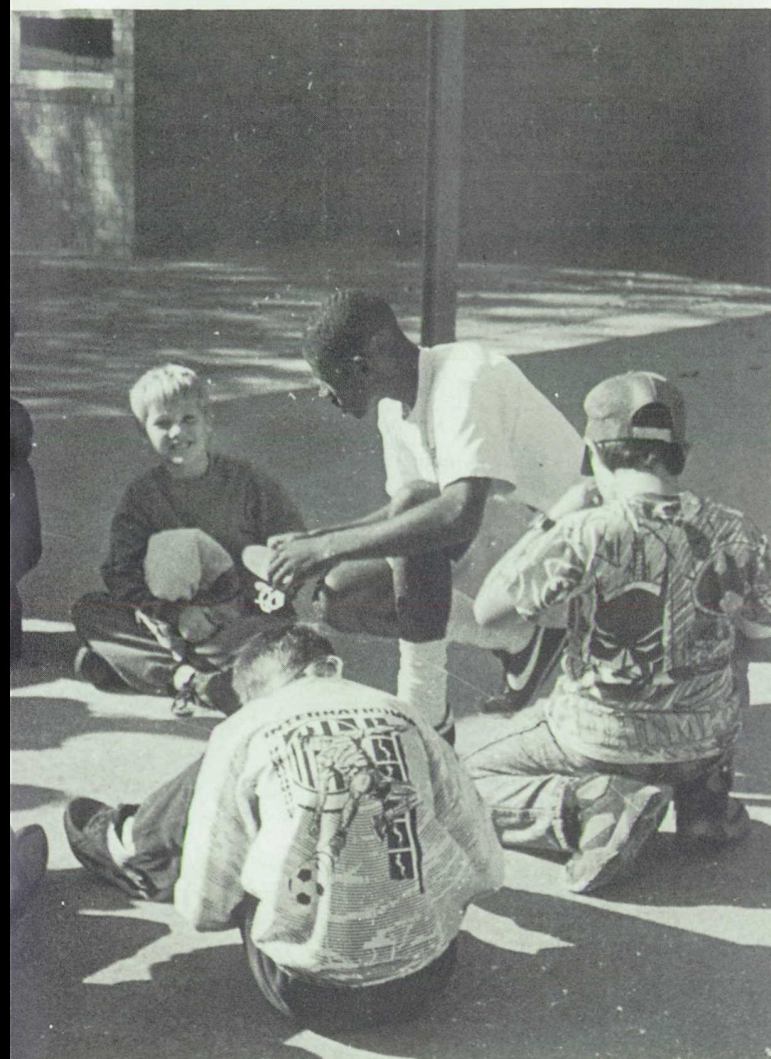

"Being a PAL is being a friend to not just someone who needs help, but to anyone who needs a friend," senior Robbie Bacchus said. by Lori Yamka, Josh Carter, & Josh Hittman

All New and Improved

Key club and PRIDE establish roll

With energy and enthusiasm two new clubs started their first year. Both provided students with new opportunities and experiences.

The Key club promoted initiative, leadership ability, and good citizenship. Rae Ann Gerken, a new physical science teacher, directed the club which attracted over 20 members.

"I've always wanted to help people in the community, and the Key club seems like the best way to help," sophomore Amanda Ross said.

Gerken, along with a sponsor from the Kiwanis organization, put together several activities for Key club members, which included participation in the Christmas Stroll, Santa calling, and visiting hospice patients.

"I think the Key club is a great addition to GHS and I hope it lasts a long time," Gerken said.

PRIDE, Personal Responsibility in Drug Education, sponsored activities and educated students about drug use. Over 120 students participated in PRIDE, sponsored by Barbara Pearce, social issues coordinator and home economics teacher Debbie Segler.

PRIDE sponsored numerous lock-ins and activities during Red Ribbon week.

"PRIDE helps people see the dangers of drugs and helps them say no," sophomore Josh Hittman said.

As well as building friendship and self-esteem, PRIDE also provided drug education for lower grade levels.

"It's helpful to the community because it provides alternatives for drug and alcohol abuse," sophomore Brett Dilley said.

PRIDE encouraged students to be positive role models and developed leadership skills.

FFA, FHA, FCA encourage students

Encouraging and supporting students topped the list of many clubs including FFA, FHA, and FCA. These clubs ranged from helping students prepare for the future to just supporting its members.

FFA, once known as Future Farmers of America, encouraged students to investigate other fields that include agricultural and animal sciences. FFA also participated in several competitions and livestock shows which taught students responsibility.

"The FFA is a growing organization that has helped me make new friends and meet priorities," junior Chris Vogler said.

FHA, Future Homemakers of America, expanded its instruction to include more than the wife and mother image. Food service students, sponsored by Laura Sue Smith, learned to cook for large numbers, which they did for Frost Award recipients.

H.E.C.E., another part of FHA, coordinated half a day of school with half a day of work. Thirty-seven students participated by working in child care, food service, nursing home, and health care.

"It's real important to be part of this group. They can also carry it with them on a resume," sponsor Debbie Segler said.

FCA, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, supported their members and taught them to do their best in competition. Members also learned about sportsmanship and how to get along with others.

"FCA is a real supportive organization that backs all the teams," senior Eowyn Buchan said. "It provides encouragement for those who need it."

Angel Nettleton

Angel, you have always been so happy and fun to be around. As you start your adult life, know that your brother and I are so very proud of you and excited for you. Your faith and love for our Lord Jesus is an inspiration and comfort to me and I know He will light your path. We love you

Mom and James

"...They come they go - these Loves we know.

Life's Tides are ever moving;

But year on year, they still seem near - so great the power of loving."

Rhonda,

True friends are forever and no friend could ever be truer to me. NO matter where we are, in my heart we'll be together. You'll always be my best friend.

Congratulations,

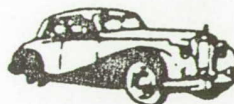

Angel

REMEMBER WHEN...

Hurricane Andrew hit the Florida and Louisiana coast and the aftermath,
The Clintons and the Gores came to Wal-Mart,
Prince Charles and Princess Di split,
ALADDIN,
The Amy Fisher story aired on ABC, CBS, and NBC,
Elizabeth Taylor got married- again!
Chevy introduced the new Camero,
Storm of the Century on the East coast,
Lena Guerro lied on her resume,
Aggies in the Cotton Bowl,
Cheers showed its last episode,
Dizzy Gillespi died,
The Woody Allen and Mia Farrow Scandal,
Ross Perot entered the race for President, dropped out, and then got back in,
The Dream Team won Gold at the Olympics,
David Koresh in Waco, the World Trade Center was bombed, Monica Selles was stabbed in the back - literally, the KKK rallied in Austin, the Toronto Blue Jays won the World Series, Lollapalooza II,
UNFORGIVEN,
The Rodney King trial for the second time,
Ethnic cleansing in Bosnia,
Troops were sent to Somalia,
Clinton beat Bush,
The Cowboys won the Super Bowl (and the Bills lost for the THIRD time),
A FEW GOOD MEN,
the Mississippi River overran its banks,
the Bulls won the NBA finals, then there were riots in Chicago, again, Kay Bailey Huttchenson became the first woman senator from Texas,
Clinton put his wife, Hillary Rhodam Clinton, in charge of health care in America,
Texas got the Lottery,
Texas Schools were almost closed because Legislatures couldn't agree on a School Finance Plan and then at the last minute they did!

International Exposure

Nordeners experience local classrooms, culture

Fourteen exchange students from Norden, Germany and two of their supervisors arrived here during Spring Break. These students spent the majority of March with their hosts/hostesses, familiarizing themselves with American customs and traditions.

One of the early tourist attractions they experienced was San Antonio. Although the visitors expressed disappointment with the cold, rainy weather similar to that of their home country, they did enjoy other aspects of the city.

"We don't have malls like this in Germany," said Tanja Schafer. "We must travel to each store."

In addition to the Rivercenter, which provided many shopping opportunities for the visitors who could buy American much cheaper than German, they also saw the movie The Alamo at the Imax.

"I did not understand much of the movie, but I thought it was good," said Schafer. Most of the students had difficulty understanding the movie, even though they have had seven years of English compared to the Americans mere one or two years of German.

Other weekend activities included shopping at the malls, touring 6th Street and the Drag, or just congregating as a group at someone's house. Often these group activities commenced at the home of junior Lauren Moran, where the students enjoyed playing German/American pool games.

These activities served as ice breakers for the two groups, and helped them get to know each other in surroundings comfortable to both groups.

"It's funny because they talk to each other in German, but when they mess up, they scream English cuss words!" said Moran. She thought it was rather interesting that they knew so much of the slang already (prior to their visit).

The Nordeners also attended other activities, such as the talent show. Although they found parts of it to be rather slow, they all enjoyed the bands' performances, especially visitor Tanja Schafer, who recognized some of the music as some that her hostess listened to.

Similar to recent American dance fads, mosh pits are also popular in Germany. One of the bands' performances aroused an excitement in the crowd and students flocked towards the front to join all the hot, sweaty bodies at the base of the stage.

Among the first to join the group were a few of the Germans who were intensely relieved to be a part of a familiar teenage tradition.

Though the pit never got out of hand, a couple of the visitors surprisingly learned that moshing is considered dangerous and is usually not tolerated by the school.

Other obvious differences emerged from the two groups. The foreigners were unaccustomed to quite so much fast food - they have only a few restaurants in their small town.

"I had such a hard time feeding Caroline because she hates all kinds of fast food," said junior Jesse Kelly-Landes of her rather finicky eater. "She did have an abundant supply of chocolate in her room, though."

In addition to introducing the Germans to new foods, they were also introduced to various other pastimes, such as the Rocky Horror Picture Show.

It provided a rather unique view of the American culture for the visitors, one that most of them were not very pleased with.

"I did not like it so much," said Schafer of the show. No doubt the actors dressed in drag that ran up and down the aisles shouting at the screen the whole time seemed a little intimidating for the students who couldn't really understand the fast-paced performance.

Though it was not a very successful outing, others proved to be much more entertaining, such as learning to drive. Since the German students do not get their licenses until they turn 18, they were enthusiastic to experiment on American roads.

"I cried the whole time!" said a frustrated Kelly-Landes, who attempted to teach her exchange partner the art of driving a car.

"I just closed my eyes and prayed for my life and my insurance," Moran said. She agreed that it was definitely a hair-raising adventure, but it was fun.

The majority of the German students ride their bikes to school everyday, some traveling as far as six miles to and from school. Others take the bus or hitchhike, a rather unfavorable option for one of the Americans who will be making the return trip to Norden this summer.

"I think it'll drive my parents crazy (that I will be) hitchhiking to school every day," junior Catherine Brown said.

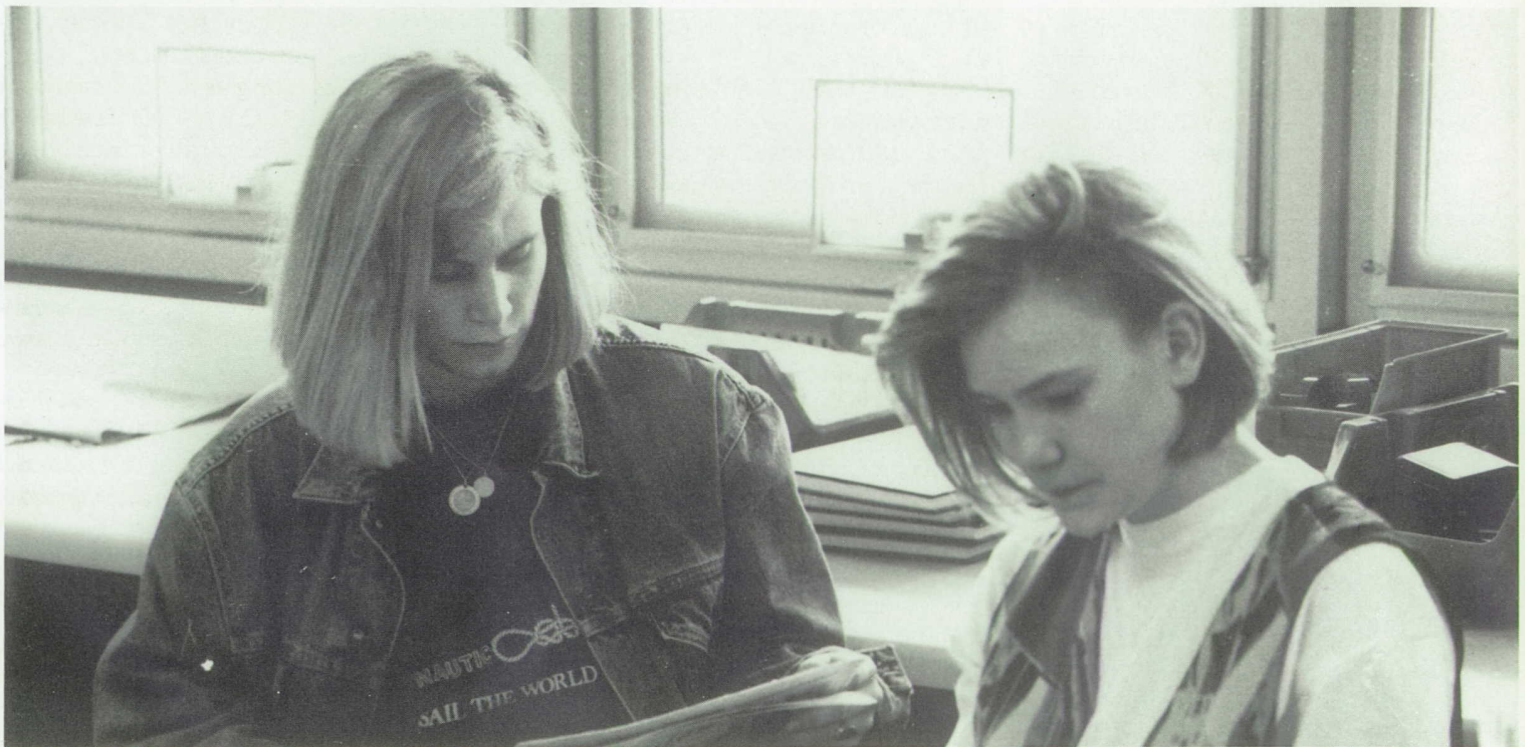

In addition to Brown, the other returning students are looking forward to an eventful month abroad this summer and hope to come back with a greater knowledge of a new people and culture. by Drewe Hoppe

All Together, a Class

Now, a new group becomes seniors

Graduation, as usual, closed out the official school year. While some students traveled to Germany under an exchange program, others spent part of the summer in summer school, either to catch-up, make-up or to get ahead.

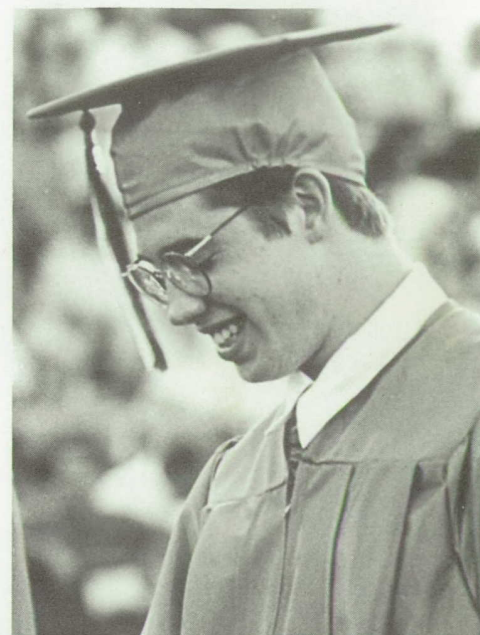

"This year was my hardest year ever," junior Ruth Langenegger said, expressing the sentiments of most juniors. "I've never had a year this hard."

Both the summer before and the summer after her junior year, Langenegger attended summer school, just to be able to take all the subjects she possibly could, and helped finish up the yearbook.

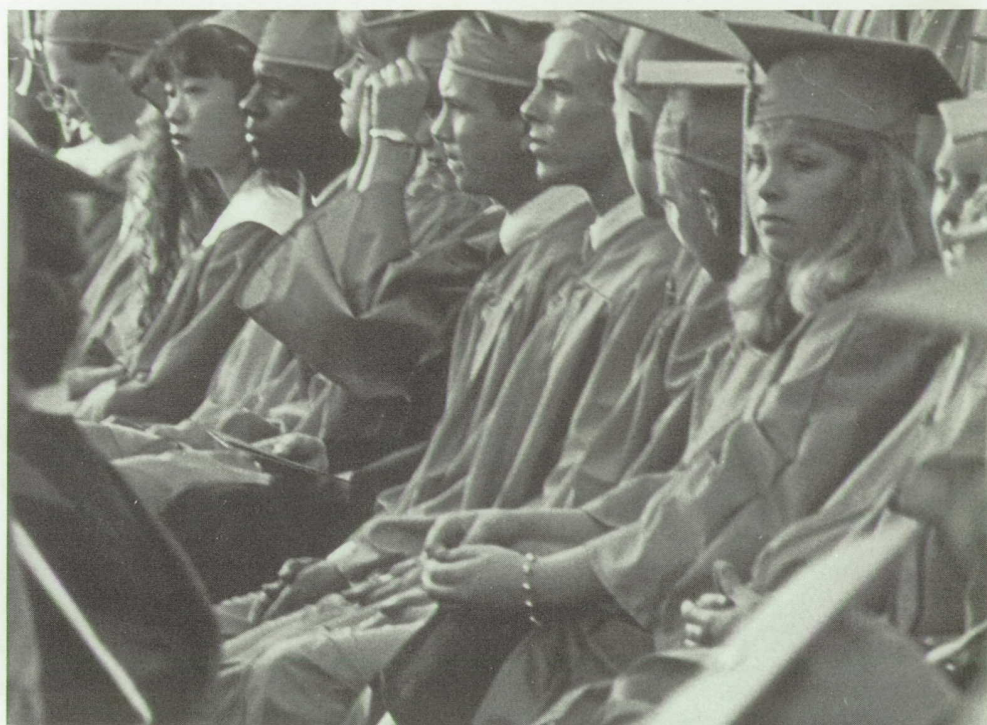

"It was the greatest year ever," yearbook/newspaper photographer John Martin said. "I graduated!"

For a little while they were All Together. Now they prepared to go their separate ways.

I GRADUATED! As he returns to his seat, graduate John Martin looks at his diploma. Graduates lined up to receive diplomas and remained in line until they returned to their seats.

THIS WAY PLEASE: On Eagle Field, counselor Larry Loudamy and junior Principal Dwane Lenox advise graduating seniors on the best path to take to receive their diplomas. Administrators, counselors and teachers sat among the graduates and guided them on their way.

WE'RE LEAVING: On a warm evening, the last Saturday in May, graduates sit on Eagle Field, listening to the speaker during their graduation ceremony. Close to 300 received their degrees.

WE'RE STAYING: To the left of the graduates, band members, juniors and below, give their attention to the ceremonies. The band, without its seniors, played appropriate music for the graduation celebration.

Lindy,
 Thanks for being
 such a great friend.
 I enjoy having class w/you.
 Hopefully we'll survive this shitty class. Good luck in the future and good luck w/ the guys. Stay cool.

Love,
 Anne

Lindy,
 you're a great lab partner and a sweet person. Good luck with life.

Lindy, you've been a great friend for as long as I have known you.
 Especially P.E. Good
 Luck in the future.
 Seniors Rule!

Nessa

Lindy, well you're a sweet girl and stay that way. I really enjoyed having you in all my classes.
 Love,
 Annette

 Mule.

Josten's Publishing Company printed the 47th volume of the Aerie yearbook. The staff would like to extend its thanks to Robin Torres for her concept, design and artwork used on the cover. Using the darkroom to produce all black and white pictures, staff photographers and photojournalism students took all pictures with the exception of class photos taken by George Gideon and Associates of Delmar Studios. Staff members designed all layouts and graphics, developed the theme with Palantino fonts and pasted up pages, using Pagemaker 2 on Macintosh computers.
